INSPECTOR LEE WAS ON THE STAND

PIERCE WITNESS TO-DAY IN THE DOYLE TRIAL

What District Attorney Moran Is Alleged to Have Said to Councilman Harding Subject of Testimony To-day—Superintendent Doyle Is Expected to Testify in Own Behalf.

At the resumption of the trial of James H. Doyle, superintendent of streets, who is charged with an attempt to improperly influence votes in connection with the passing of the city's loan bill of $1,599,000, to-day, the evidence introduced was largely relative to the testimony of District Attorney John B. Moran, who on the witness stand yesterday said that he did not use profane language to Councilman Charles T. Harding, or threaten to put him behind the bars.

One witness testified that District Attorney Moran did use profane language to Councilman Harding during an interview at the courthouse.

Another witness said Mr. Moran did not use profane language.

Councilman Harding said on the stand:

"I cannot remember just what the profane language was, but I remember that it was profane."

Councilman Myron E. Pierce, brought forward as a witness for the defence, was the man who accused the District Attorney of using profanity.

PIERCE TELLS OF THREAT.

Councilman Pierce said he heard Moran say to Harding that if he did not tell the truth he would put him behind the bars. He also testified that he heard Harding say that if they hadn't summoned him at the time they did and in the manner in which they did, they would never have got him.

"Did Mr. Moran use any profane language while you and Councilman Harding were in his office?" asked Lawyer Coakley.

"Yes."

"Just what did he say?"

"He said —— you if you lie, I'll put you behind the bars."

Here Lawyer Coakley reminded the witness of the testimony of the District Attorney when he denied using any profanity, and asked him if he cared to retract his testimony. Councilman Pierce insisted that Moran had used profanity.

Timothy Mooney, assistant city messenger, testified that on the night the loan bill was under consideration by the Common Council that he was attending to his duties in and about the anteroom. He did not see Councilman Harding in the anteroom at any time during the evening. He did not see Harding talk to Mr. Doyle. Would have seen them if they were talking together.

Cross-examined by Mr. McGettrick, the witness said there were five assistants connected with the city messenger's office. He described their duties as answering questions, giving information and once a week fixing up the files in the aldermanic and council chambers.

DOYLE WITH COUNCILMEN.

Mr. Mooney admitted that he saw Mr. Doyle talking to several councilmen that evening. Pressed to name one, he said he saw Councilman Foley talking to the superintendent of streets.

Lieutenant Hugh J. Lee, Mr. Moran's investigator, was recalled to be asked one question.

"Did Mr. Moran use any profance language during the interview with Councilman Harding when you were present?"

"He did not," the lieutenant answered.

Daniel J. Sheehan, chief janitor and assistant city messenger, saw Mr. Doyle in the anteroom of the Council chamber on the night the loan bill was being considered. He did not see Doyle go to the desk with Harding and sit there and talk. Would have seen them if they had done so. He himself was talking to Doyle when the roll call was taken on the main question, and had been doing so for twenty minutes.

Cross-examination brought the admission from Mr. Sheehan that his name appeared twice on the list of city employes, but he said he only drew one salary, $1,400, as chief janitor.

SPILLANE JURY FAILS VERDICT; IS SENT BACK

Judge Crosby Urges Them to Make Another Effort to Reach Agreement.

The jury in the case of Jeremiah Spillane, a Roxbury real estate man, who is accused of the larceny of $2,500 from Miss Mary V. Gill, a Back Bay dressmaker, reported to Judge Crosby in the Superior Criminal Court at 9:30 o'clock to-day that they were unable to agree.

They had been deliberating since yesterday afternoon, and the loss of sleep made the jurymen look worn out. Nine of them are more than fifty years old.

Judge Crosby did not dismiss them. He sent them back to the jury room to make another effort to agree on a verdict. He said that if they were divided into a majority and a minority, the minority should seriously consider the views of the majority.

Judge Crosby called District Attorney Moran into the judges' lobby yesterday for a conference lasting about an hour. Attorney Mason, counsel for Spillane, and Assistant District Attorney Philip J. Doherty, who is conducting the prosecution, were present, and three men who are on the venire of traverse jurors were sent for. They are Cornelius H. Buckley, James Corrigan and James E. Coyne. Buckley was not present, but the other two went into the conference room.

WOMAN SELLS CIGARETTES TO BOY; FINED $20

Mrs. Della Redoff, proprietor of a tobacco store at No. 82 State road, Beachmont, was to-day fined $20 by Judge Bosson in the Chelsea Police Court on a charge of selling cigarettes to a 12-year-old boy. She pleaded not guilty, but paid the fine.

It was testified in court that the parents of the lad and the police as well had warned Mrs. Redoff not to sell cigarettes to the boy nor to other minors. Yesterday, it is alleged, she sold the boy a package of cigarettes, and she was at once arrested.

Democratic Candidates Continue Fight;
WHITNEY FAR IN LEAD

Latest Figures Show Whitney Has 395 Delegates, Bartlett 196, with 283 Unplaced.

Revised figures made up of returns from all the Massachusetts cities and towns which have leected delegates to the Democratic State convention show that Henry M. Whitney has 386 delegates, Charles W. Bartlett 191 delegates, and that there are 147 unpledged men entitled to a vote.

The convention is entitled to 150 delegates more than have been heard from. This is accounted for by a lack of Democratic organizations at some fifty towns.

Mr. Whitney has not received enough delegatse to assure him the nomination, and hte result will have to be settled on hte convention floor on October 5.

BARTLETT MEN HOPEFUL.

The Bartlett men say that they are prepared to make a strong plea to all the doubtful delegates ot support therl man, and are confident of wnining the nomination for General Bartlett.

Boston's primaries, slimly attended despite the pleasant weather, showed a lead for Henry M. Whitney over General Charles W. Bartlett for delegates to the Springfield convention.

Whitney carried sixteen Boston wards and secured a majority of the delegates in three others. Bartlett carried Wards 8, 13, 19 and 20 complete and secured one delegate in each of Wards 2, 23 and 25.

Wards 16 and 24, where a ticket filed by the ward organization was uncontested, is claimed by both Whitney and Bartlett. The fourteen delegates in these two wards afford considerable interest for the rival Democratic candidates for Governor, the delegates being stanch Fitzgerald men and many of them close personal friends of the Mayor.

Whitney 115, Bartlett 41, doubtful 14, is Boston's showing for Democratic State delegates.

Fourteen cities and towns outside Boston held primaries also yesterday and helped along the showing for General Bartlett. doubtful.

Daniel F. Buckley, the Whitney campaign manager, claims close to 600 votes in the convention. This, even by Whitney men, is believed to be an exaggerated estimate.

BIG GAIN BY BARTLETT.

Daniel J. Kiley, for the Bartlett committee, claims half of the delegates elected last night in Boston for Bartlett. Kiley declares that many of the delegates unpledged and on delegations that were uncontested are not in a position to declare themselves, but will be found in the convention voting for Bartlett.

The gain made by Bartlett in the cities and towns electing delegates yesterday is gratifying to the Bartlett managers, especially so because of the strenuous efforts expended by the Whitney managers since last week's caucuses towards securing delegates in these outside places.

Democratic, Republican, Independence League and Prohibition nominations were made in the senatorial and representative districts in Boston and delegates were chosen by all four parties to conventions which are to nominate candidates for District-Attorney and county offices.

AMERICANS HURT IN PARIS TRAIN WRECK

NANTES, France, Sept. 25.—Several Americans are reported badly hurt as the result of a collision on the main line of the Paris-Cherbourg railroad to-day.

The Cherbourg express from Paris crashed into a special train carrying transatlantic passengers just beyond Breval tunnel. The impact was terrific and the special was telescoped, fifteen persons being hurt, several, it is feared, fatally. A number of others were hurt in the express.

An American woman and her daughter were pinned down in the wreckage. It is not know how badly they are hurt and their names are not yet available. Wrecking crews and doctors have been hurried to the scene.

The special train carried the passengers who were to board the steamer Adriatic, which was to sail this afternoon.

It [illegible] at [illegible], ten minutes ahead [illegible] express. Because of a slight accident to the locomotive the train was stopped just outside of the tunnel to permit the engine man to make repairs. Through an oversight, it is asserted, a flag was not sent back, and the express crashing around a curve at a very high rate of speed smashed into the rear of the special, telescoping the last car.

Frightened women and children jumped from the wreckage and ran hysterically into the darkness of the tunnel.

As soon as possible the injured were brought here on a special train and taken to the local hospital.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—At the offices of the White Star Line it is stated that they lack details of the wreck at Nantes, but they insist no Americans were injured in it. They insist that the rear car of the special was occupied entirely by French and declare they believe all of their passengers are safe. Hence they discredit the report that comes fro mNantes.

The officials say the train had 210 passengers on board.

TO FREE CHILD SLAVES OF CRUEL WIRE TRUST

WORCESTER CITIZENS, AROUSED, TO TAKE IMMEDIATE STEPS.

WORCESTER, Sept. 25.—Backed by Secretary of War William H. Taft, President Eliot of Harvard, Cardinal Gibbons, Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, and their associates on the National Child Labor Committee, Worcester citizens opposed to the buying of children at $1 a head will denounce that practice of the American Steel and Wire Company at a monster mass meeting, called for the night of Wednesday, October 9, in Washburn Hall.

The interest and support of the National Child Labor Committee has been enlisted through the efforts of the Rev. Eliot White of Worcester, who has had an extended corespondence with Acting Secretary Owen R. Lovejoy of New York.

"Minor's Release" the Issue.

"Any assistance that we may be able to render," Secretary Lovejoy says for the committee, "will be gladly given."

"And that means," the Rev. Mr .White said to-day to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN, "that the Steel and Wire Company must abandon its obnoxious so-called 'minor's release.' This is New England, and the Twentieth Century.

Public attention was called to the dollar-a-head game of the Steel and Wire Company in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN of July 28.

In order that they might have absolute control over the children in their employ, the trust had just demanded that parents sign a "minor release."

Pay One Dollar a Head.

Each parent who signs this "release" receives $1.

For one hundred cents the father or mother not only waives control over the little wage-earner and waives the right to collect wages, but—possibly most important of all to the mighty trust—waives all legal right to collect damages in the event of the child being killed or maimed in any of the three big mills.

Many of the parents who signed are unable to read English. Some of them appealed to their pastors, and in several cases the priests advised them not to sign.

Anson A. Reed, a member of the Independence League in Worcester, was the first citizen to issue a call in the cause of the little people and their needy parents. Then the Rev. Mr. White took hold, the National Child Labor Committee began to ask questions and the mass meeting was called. It will be a rouser.

FINED $75 FOR FIST ATTACK

With the intention of putting an end to the series of attacks which have recently taken place in Quincy, Judge Albert Avery of the Quincy District Court to-day fined Timothy White $75 for beating Max Leven. This is an unusually large fine for the offence, but Judge Avery explained by saying he wished to make an example of the defendant and if possible stop assaults in the town.

White and Leven were engaged in a dispute last Friday on Branch street over an oil stove. Leven alleged White beat him severely with his fist.

REPAIR YALE TO SAIL TOMORROW

Mechanics worked all night on the steamship Yale, which broke her steering gear early yesterday morning while on her way from New York and arrived about nine hours late. Another crew relieved these men to-day, and work will be kept up so that the Yale can be made ready for her New York trip to-morrow afternoon. It was found that the break was more serious than was at first supposed.

The Harvard arrived an hour late to-day, having bucked a northwest gale and head-tides all the way from New York. She had about 500 passengers on board.

in both the Democratic and Republican parties and the fight for the Third District Democratic Councilor nomination divided interest with the contest for State delegates.

WALKOVER FOR BARRY.

Edward P. Barry had a walkover for the councilor nomination, defeating James F. Sullivan in every ward and winning by a majority of over seven thousand.

Senator "Tom" Curley defeats Lanergan for the Senate in the Fourth District. Senator Linehan is renominated in the Sixth over Moynihan, while Tilton S. Bell obtains the Republican senatorial nomination in the Eighth. Senator Bromberg is defeated by Gideon P. Abbott for the Republican senatorial nomination in the Ninth.

George F. Monahan won out the three-cornered senatorial fight against Teeling and Doherty in the Second Suffolk, and John J. Butler of Ward 18 defeated Senator Clarke in the Seventh District.

Democratic county and District Attorney delegates were elected for the most part unpledged, but indications point to the nomination of James Donovan for sheriff.

In a few wards tickets favorable to District Attorney Moran were in the field and Moran decisively carried Ward 13, securing nine delegates. In Ward 19 the Moran ticket won eleven delegates. In both of these wards the Moran ticket was opposed by a set of delegates favorable to Joseph A. Dennison. In Wards 7 and 11 the Moran ticket was defeated by an "unpledged" set of delegates. In only four wards, 7, 11, 13 and 19, were there Moran tickets.

Quinn Defeated by Leaguer.

In only one ward—Ward 3—did a straightout Dennison ticket for District Attorney appear, and in this ward Dennison was beaten. Dennison claims the support of the majority of the unpledged delegates.

The Republican nomination for District Attorney will be settled in the convention.

John Quinn, Jr., is again defeated for the Democratic representative nomination in Ward 7. He was beaten by Bartholomew A. Brickley, who has also the Independence League nomination.

Brickley defeated Quinn a year ago, but Quinn ran independently and was elected.

Buckley's Claims.

Daniel F. Buckley, campaign manager for Whitney, issues the following statement:

"The returns show, as I have all along claimed, that 135 of the 170 delegates in Boston favor Mr. Whitney. When it comes to the convention it is my opinion that a larger number than this will vote for his nomination.

"In Wards 8 and 19, for instance, with delegations unpledged, but accredited to General Bartlett, it is certain that Mr. Whitney will receive a number of votes.

"As a result of the recount in Fall River two votes were added to the Whitney column, making the Fall River delegation of 17 solid for Mr. Whitney.

"In Holyoke one delegate has been added to those favoring Mr. Whitney, giving us nine instead of eight, while still another delegate will probably vote for Mr. Whitney.

"Combining the result of Friday's caucuses with the figures of yesterday's primaries, it is absolutely certain that Mr. Whitney will have close to six hundred votes at the convention."

HISGEN AGAIN ON TOUR AFTER DELAY BY RAIN

PITTSFIELD, Sept. 25.—Thomas L. Hisgen, who is touring Western Massachusetts in the interests of his candidacy for the nomination for Governor by the Independence League, spent several hours here yesterday, and in the afternoon continued his carriage drive. Mr. Hisgen arrived here on Saturday after visiting towns all along the route from Springfield to Pittsfield.

He left his horse and carriage here, and returned to Springfield Saturday evening to spend Sunday with his family. Mr. Hisgen intended to return here by train and continue his political campaign Monday, but owing to the rain he postponed the trip for a day.

Mr. Hisgen went from Pittsfield to Dalton yesterday, stopping at the farmhouses along the road, distributing his literature and meeting the farmers. From Dalton he intends to go to Becket and then to Russell and Huntington. He expects to reach Springfield on Thursday.

Italian statesman believes sixteen of his colleagues perished because of "The Evil Eye." Amazing superstition of a great political leader. Read the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

PROBE DEATH OF BROOKLINE VICTIM OF GAS

Orville A. Atkinson, Well Known Tailor, Believe to Have Committed Suicide.

Medical Examiner Magrath and the police are investigating the mysterious death of Orville A. Atkinson in a tailor shop at No. 50 Bromfield street. The police believe it is a case of suicide.

Atkinson was a bachelor, sixty years old. He lived with his sister, Mrs. J. P. Thwing in Brookline.

He was a cutter and had worked in Boston for thirty years, being well known in the tailoring trade. For twenty years he had been employed by his nephew, who does business at No. 50 Bromfield street as "Thwing the Tailor."

It was Mr. Thwing who discovered the body. When he entered his premises today he found his uncle sitting in a chair in an anteroom. Illuminating gas had made the air in the room suffocating and the police said that death was due to asphyxiation. Mr. Thwing stated that he found one gas burner fully opened.

He said that he left his uncle at 5:30 yesterday in the tailoring rooms and that he appeared to be in good spirits. The Thwing family was surprised this morning to find that Mr. Atkinson had been away all night. It is said that he was a man of immaculate habits, and his relatives are at a loss to find any reason why he should seek death.

Danish physician feeds his family at a cost of two cents a day and a food cult called "Hindhedes" has been formed. Read in the SUNDAY AMERICAN about the cheapest menu ever heard of

WEPT OVER HIS BABES IN PRISON

Affecting Scene When Harvey Searles Saw Little Ones After Separation.

SANITY DECIDED TO-DAY

Special to the Boston American.

FARMINGTON, Sept. 25.—Whether or not Harvey A. Searles, the guide who is charged with the murder of his wife, is sane or not and whether he should stand trial and make the sensational plea of the unwritten law will be known in a report from Dr. Sandford, superintendent of the insane hospital at Augusta, to-day. Attorney-General Hamlin, who is here to direct the case for the government, said that he expected the report at any time and on what Dr. Sandford said much of the future of the case would depend.

Just before his departure for Augusta Searles saw his two children, Emma, aged four years, and Sherwood, aged eighteen months, the first time since Mrs. Searles dropped dead at his feet after the shot was fired.

The accused man was in the corridor when he saw his sister coming toward the jail with the children. He sprang to the grating and yelled at the elder, "Emma, Emma, don't you know papa?"

The child recognized her father and, waving back at him, she exclaimed, "Oh, papa, hello."

A moment later the two were inside the jail and Searles was madly clasping them in his arms. He wept over them, laughed with them, cuddled them close and seemed for the moment to forget that he was soon to be on trial for his life's freedom. It was with difficulty that the jailers separated father and children, and Searles watched them from the jail until they were out of sight.

Should the verdict of the physician be that Searles is sane and should stand trial, the Grand Jury will be asked to return an indictment at once. If a bill is found against him, Searles will be placed on trial a few days after.

BRIGHAM, FOE OF 'MACHINE,' LOSES FIGHT

Senior Member of House Also Opposed the Shoe Machinery Trust.

MARLBORO, Sept. 25.—The defeat of Representative William M. Brigham, Republican, after nine years in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, was decidedly the biggest surprise of joint caucus day. The veteran was beaten 590 to 424 by Raoul Beaudreau, a young attorney, just entering politics.

Brigham was punished, according to the current story, for being "not enough of a Republican." The machine had been souring on him for years. He refused to "take orders." He was too good a friend of Representative Martin Lomasney of Boston, the Democratic leader of the House. For years they had sat side by side in the third division. Brigham was the record member of the House in point of continuous service.

Some of his friends, urging Brigham to "run independent," said to-day that they could see the fine Italian hand of the Shoe Machinery Trust in the downfall of Brigham at the caucuses. Brigham had for years championed the anti-trust bill. They say, however, that the Shoe Machinery people were openly in afvor of the Beaudreau candidacy.

This was the result of the vote in the seven wards:

	Brigham	Beaudreau.
Ward 1	70	40
Ward 2	33	38
Ward 3	60	165
Ward 4	23	188
Ward 5	73	74
Ward 6	100	46
Ward 7	[illegible]	39
Totals	424	590

Beaudreau naturally got the bulk of his support in Wards 3 and 4, where the French-American vote is predominant. In the event of a split it is thought that there may be a chance for the Democratic nominee, Charles F. McCarthy.

LABOR MEN DETERMINED TO CAUSE DRAPER DEFEAT

TO ACT UPON LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR'S ANTI-LABOR RECORD AT CONVENTION.

Organized labor, through the State Branch, A. F. of L., will go after Lieutenant-Governor Eben S. Draper with a vengeance at the coming election, and expects to make its influence felt in a more pronounced manner than a year ago, when E. Gerry Brown, labor's candidate, came within an ace of defeating the Hopedale magnate.

The Draper case will be one of the principal matters to be acted upon at the annual convention of the State Branch, A. F. of L., which is to open at Milford, Monday, October 14. Milford is situated hard by the town of Hopedale, and the domineering influence of the Drapers is said to extend to that city.

A committee of five was appointed by the executive board of the State Branch last Spring to investigate Draper's anti-labor record and to place it before the coming convention. This committee meets next Sunday at Wells Memorial Building, this city, to prepare its report.

The committee's investigation, it is said, has shown that the Lieutenant-Governor's record of antagonism to union labor is even worse than brought out at the last election. The committee it is said, has gained possession of correspondence between Draper and the iron moulders' committee at the time when Draper advised the Moulders' Union to go ahead and form a union, and when he later broke his word and disrupted the union. These and other charges are in the hands of the committee.

About 200 delegates are expected to attend the convention, which will probably last a week.

SEA SERPENT AT SOUTHBORO

The Sea Serpent is said to have left the North Atlantic seaboard where he has been sighted, according to various witnesses, every Summer for several years, and gone inland to the big basin of the Metropolitan water system at White's Corner in Southboro. Whether he traveled by automobile or trolley car is unknown.

Lester Smith, Boston & Worcester railway starter, says he saw him.

And all because no money could be found to pay a debt of $550. Members of the disbanded troupe are preparing to leave the city for their homes or for the Rialto to look for other berths before the season wanes.

Paris Shocked By Rich Beauty's Story of McKee's Cruelty

WIFE, SEEKING DIVORCE, LAYS BARE ASTOUNDING FACTS.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—That A. Hart McKee dragged his wife, the beautiful Cornelia Baxter of Denver, across the floor of the house, threw her down and beat her, allowed her but a few francs for her own use and compelled her to sign checks which were indorsed to himself, and which he used in entertaining his friends while his wife was practically a prisoner in her own house, and not allowed even to write a single letter home to her mother, are some of the astounding allegations that have been revealed in connection with her divorce suit.

Seeks Freedom After Humiliation.

These and other sensational facts are to be offered, it has been learned, at the suit for absolute divorce and the custody of their nineteen-months-old boy, when tried in the French courts. From one of her intimate friends comes these remarkable charges and details of the facts that caused her to separate from her husband, after enduring a life of humiliation and pain during the last year.

He Wrote Her Letters.

So cruel was the treatment accorded the beautiful young woman that she feared to attempt to communicate with her relatives when commanded not to do so by her husband. When she desired to write to her mother, McKee, it is said, first wrote out the letter himself and she was compelled to copy it in her handwriting. Her parents were left in entire ignorance of her condition. Her father, Mr. Baxter, who is now in Paris, has in his possession these letters written by the wife and duplicates in McKee's own handwriting which Mrs. McKee saved to show her father, and these will be shown to bear out the statement that there were weeks when she had no more liberty than a felon in a prison cell and that she was never allowed to have more than a few francs at a time.

Forced to Sign Checks.

Every check which she sent to the bank is said to have been made out by her husband, who forced her to sign them for any amount he wished. Mr. Baxter, through an attorney for whom he sent in order to understand thoroughly French and American law regarding divorce proceedings, has obtained from Mrs. McKee's bankers all of these checks, which vary from two to ten thousand francs. It will be proved by these that all of this money went to McKee and that the wife was not only prevented from enjoying the use of her own money, but that her fortune was squandered in large amounts on McKee's friends. Every jewel and even the engagement ring given her by her first husband, Hugh Tevis, had been either sold or taken from her by the man she is now seeking to divorce.

During the two years of housekeeping Mrs. McKee has had thirty-five maids leave her employ because, it is alleged, of insulting remarks by the master of the household. Affidavits of over half that number will be used and six women will be mentioned when the case comes up for trial.

Took Children's Money.

On one occasion Mrs. Baxter, her mother, sent Mrs. McKee a hundred dollars with which to buy gifts for the two children, but this letter is said never to have reached the wife. At another time Mrs. McKee gave her housekeeper a bill for some thousands of francs to be paid to a dressmaker in order that the woman might get he commission. On her return from the business house the housekeeper was accosted by McKee in an allway and, it is alleged, compelled to turn the commission over to him.

Mrs. McKee has borne all her sufferings in a maner that is wonderful to her friends, who know the brutal treatment said to have been accorded her by her husband. She is devoted to her baby boy and to Hugh Tevis, her seven-year-old son by her first marriage.

Grossly Deceived Her.

McKee even deceived his wife about his first divorce, for he told her it had already been obtained when they first met, and she believed him, but she subsequently learned that this was untrue. It was then that the father intervened and tried to break off the match, but Cornelia was so desperately in love that she could not give him up, and they were married shortly after he had secured the divorce.

Mr. Baxter, who has been virtually estranged from his daughter since her marriage to McKee, came directly to Paris when he learned of the cruelty of her husband, and will stand by her in her trouble if he has to take the case through all the courts of France and America. He was enraged to learn the terrible details of the months of imprisonment his daughter had undergone in her home in the Rue De Vigni. Mrs. McKee had the papers filed here because in no other way could she be free from McKee in the interim.

In the event there is any question of the validity of absolute freedom and the custody of the child in the French decisions, Mr. Baxter will take the case to the American courts. He is quoted as saying that it will be a sorry day for Hart McKee if he ever sets foot on American soil. Mrs. Baxter will join her daughter here in a few days.

FISH ACCUSED BY HARAHAN OF SHADY DEALS

Illinois Central President Delivers Fierce Attack on His Predecessor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—What Wall street wants to know is how former President Stuyvesant Fish, of the Illinois Central railroad, will answer last night's attack on him by his successor, J. T. Harahan.

Harahan in his letter addressed to the Illinois Central stockholders in justification of Fish's removal from the presidency a year ago does not scruple to call the latter the same "ugly names" which provoked a personal encounter between them at the recent directors' meeting.

"The statement in the circular letter issued by Mr. Fish to the stockholders that the Illinois Central accounts had been padded or manipulated were absolutely untrue," says the Harahan communication. "He knows that there has been no change whatever in the relations of the Illinois Central with the Union and Southern Pacific."

Turning to the explanation for the eight directors' action in voting against Fish's re-election, the letter continues:

"There were other reasons, but out of consideration for Mr. Fish they were not specifically mentioned. The most conspicuous is that while Fish was president he loaned to himself about $1,500,000 from the treasury of the company upon security which proved inadequate and unmarketable.

"Furthermore, Mr. Fish, a member of the executive committee of the Trust Company of the Republic, deposited a large amount of money of the Illinois Central Company in that company after its credit was seriously impaired, and, although this was ultimately collected, the process required several months, and during that time the risk was a cause of great anxiety to the directors.

"Moreover he loaned to the president of the Trust Company of the Republic individually money of the Illinois Central railroad upon inadequate security, with the result that the railroad company was unable to collect the entire amount and suffered a loss."

Fish is secluded at present in his residence at Garrison, N. Y., beyond reach of telephone or telegraph, and it is thought not unlikely that he is availing himself of his retirement to prepare for a counter attack on Harahan.

LAWSON OPENS WHITNEY FIGHT IN WAKEFIELD

Arranges with Young Men's Independent Club to Begin Campaign There.

WAKEFIELD, Sept. 25.—Thomas W. Lawson is completing arrangements to open the campaign against Henry M. Whitney, should the latter be nominated by the Democrats for Governor in this, the home town of District Attorney John B. Moran.

Edward J. Walsh, president of the Young Men's Independent Club of Wakefield, has just received a letter from Mr. Lawson, replying to one from the club. The club asked the Boston financier to open the anti-Whitney campaign in Wakefield. He promised to do so.

Mr. Lawson in his letter invites Mr. Walsh to visit him in Boston. The Young Men's Independent Club proposes to make it a great event. There will be a bountiful "spread" as well as politics galore.

200 BREAKS, LAD'S RECORD FOR 50 DAYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Entirely calm, Edward Bridgeman, fourteen years old, confessed that he has committed two hundred robberies since August 5 last—about four a day on an average.

Young Bridgeman said, too, that he always "worked" in the daylight and passed his nights with his parents at home, No. 190 Ralph avenue, Brooklyn. This explains why his mother, utterly ignorant of his wrongdoings, protested that "Edward is a good boy."

This most industrious young thief has been in the hands of the Brooklyn Children's Society. The society's agents say they believed he is mentally unbalanced. They do not call him a kleptomaniac; they think he has never recovered from a surgical operation that was performed on him and that this makes him steal.

Bridgeman was arrested on August 5. Frederick B. Hyde, No. 390 McDonough street, Brooklyn, charged the boy with stealing some silver spoons and a violin. Patrolman Farrell caught the youth pawning the loot. Judge O'Keefe found him guilty and paroled him in custody of a probationary officer until October 9.

Then Bridgeman said he "got busy," and kept busy until last Monday, when he entered Abraham Rosenblum's house, No. 1,610 Forty-sixth street, and stole numerous articles.

The boy pleaded guilty in the Children's Court, and then, with some pride, recounted his record "double century" of burglarious enterprises. Judge O'Keefe sent Bridgeman to the House of Refuge.

The Brooklyn police are inclined to doubt the boy's story, but only because they have no record of his robberies.

NEW STUDENTS ARE FLOCKING TO HARVARD

Freshmen by the hundreds are flocking to Harvard College to-day to register. As soon as the new members of the class of 1911 enter the Harvard grounds they are sent to Sever Hall, where their names are recorded and the well-known red cards given them upon which they are to enter the studies which they propose to master during the first year in old Harvard.

To-morrow the upper class men are due to come back for the next year's work. They are arriving in large numbers to-day, and the dormitories are already full of life and bustle and old friends are busy greeting one another. To-morrow the upper class men register.

Many improvements have been rushed to completion since the university closed last Summer. The new Weld boathouse is all but finished, while Langdell Hall, the nwe Law School building, is finished so far as the outsdie in concerned and the workmen are busily engaged on the interior. The furniture has been secured, and it is hoped that the hall will be ready for occupancy by another month.

LIVE WIRE KILLED UNKNOWN LINEMAN

LYNN, Sept. 25.—A young Greek, whose name is not known, was instantly killed by coming in contact with a live wire at the lamp works of the General Electric Company.

A current of 500 volts passed through his body. It is thought that faulty insulation caused the fatality.

ROOSEVELTS, AMID CHEERS, OFF TO CAPITOL

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 25.—His Sumer vacation ended, President Rosevelt took the 10 a. m. train to-day for Washington.

Long before Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt and the children arrived at the depot to take the special train the townspeople were gathered on the platform. They gave "Neighbor Roosevelt" a rousing cheer as his yellow-wheeled wagon rounded the Audrey avenue curve, and cheered again as he stepped from the vehicle.

Then everybody made a rush, and for fully fiv minutes the head of the administration was engaged in shaking hands.

"Ever so glad to meet you."

"Well, well, how are you anyway?"

"By George, this in indeed a pleasure."

"Why, here's my old friend again—it does me good to see you."

A rapid fire of exclamations like these fell from the President's lips as he continued to shake hands with men, women and children. Finally he broke away from the crowd and escaped to his car.

"All aboard," shouted the conductor, and the train pulled out for Long Island City.

The President's immediate party consists of Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel and Quentin, Secretary and Mrs. Loeb and William Loeb, 3rd, and Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Latta.

GLOUCESTER SHIPWRECK.

ROCKLAND, Me., Sept. 25.—Captain Thomas Potter of Boston, master of the Gloucester vessel Grace W. Horne, accompanied by William Frazier and Jefferson Young, both of Boston, has arrived here, reporting the loss of his vessel on Wooden Ball.

HENRY M. WHITNEY

Let's to business.

I read your Brighton speech—Monday night's.

You must have crossed your wires.

It's your record that's on the target; the public don't care a hang about mine.

You say you will meet me in joint debate, your record against mine;

That every speech I make will manufacture thousands of votes for you.

Let's make 'em—those thousands of votes.

Beginning the day after you are nominated I will meet you in joint debate—if that's the word—three times a day to election eve in three different places in the State each day, or fewer, if more convenient to you.

You shall have a whole hour to open and another whole hour to close.

You may choose any subject from my being a busted "stock gambler" up to how scores of members of one Massachusetts Legislature were bribed at one session and payment of bribe money defaulted.

I will take but 3 minutes on my record, 17 minutes on the record of your owners, the System, 40 minutes on the record of THE BRIBER of Massachusetts.

If you will do it I will pay all expenses, hall hire, etc., allow you to pack the stage, and better still, I will close my eyes while your coin is being dumbjocked about the hall. Further, I will sign off in advance all libel liabilities.

On my part I agree to take my chances single-handed.

What do you say, and say it quick, for I must get to work just as soon as you are nominated.

Please do not ask me to take on any of your barrel lappers. A man, even a "stock gambler," must draw the line somewhere, and I draw it at your mud squirters. I'm a bit particular about my personal environment and finicky about my linen, and I cannot stand coming into actual contact with your garbage slingers.

You're a trained orator and probably the best all-round pledger of "my reputation, my-fortune, my-sacred-honor" on the American public platform to-day, while to take your own word for it I'm only a public-shearing busted "stock gambler." Therefore, my offer must appeal to your sure-thing commercial instincts.

Although the New Haven branch of the System has hung up a large amount of coin for expenses and a fat purse if you win out, I ask none of the plunder for the assistance you say my campaign will be to you. It may help you to your decision for me to say:

You have been flirting with Fate for a long time now, and have so far made off with "the goods," but if you accept my offer I promise I will red lantern your record so vividly along the highway to Hades that for ages and ages yet to come bribe carrying automobiles will automatically throw on their emergency brakes before entering the crimson zone.

While I refuse to be sidetracked into that pit where you have dumped all your other opponents, the pit of being kept busy meeting your attack on my record instead of keeping you hustling meeting my attack on yours, I will for the humor of it recount to you the expert's analysis of your speech of Monday night, made in answer to my specific charge that you had committed three great crimes against the citizens of Massachusetts. The [illegible] your answers:

First. Lawson advised the people to withdraw savings and buy stocks.

Second. If he had taken his own advice he would have been mortgaging Dreamwold; instead he is spoiling with money.

Third. He offers $10,000 to the Democratic party. I can prove he is busted and unable to pay $10,000 or any other amount, and as proof I state he refused to pay a man in New York $5000 when he demanded it as a prize in connection with his book "Friday, the 13th," and that man is suing for the $5000 which Lawson paid to his publishers in cash months ago to give to the one whom they decided had won it.

Fourth. Lawson's horse had pneumonia and Lawson advertised that the swelling in his throat was caused by the stableman biting him, when, as a matter of fact, the stableman had false teeth, and when Lawson was charged with it he insisted the false teeth fitted the bite.

Fifth. Lawson agreed to pay Moran's expenses last year, and then, as usual, he didn't. I say he didn't, and all Lawson says is Mr. Moran must explain his own finances, because they as knows, knows; they as shouldn't, shouldn't.

Sixth. My record in West End, New England Gas & Coke and Dominion Coal will compare with Lawson's in Trinity.

Seventh. I gave Lawson pages of free advertising, even to publishing in 27 different daily papers 27 different pictures of my shaking up and making up with him at my horse show, and promised him as much free advertising as I get and always have got, which is more than Barnum ever got, if he only would be good and let me be Governor, and Lawson was mean enough to throw down my whole free advertising scheme and substitute one where he, as usual, pays for all the advertising he gets.

Candidly, Mr. Would-be Governor, don't you think you owe some sort of an apology to those confiding citizens out in Brighton who thought they were listening to a statesman answering the most serious charge which can be made against any man? Don't you really? Or perhaps you will plead that Monday night's speech was only one of your little jokes, just as you did on that memorable day in Governor Wolcott's chamber.

Do you recall that day, the solemn chamber, the figure of the handsome Governor, who so honorably and ably filled the great chair under the gilt dome? Can you see again those fascinating eyes twinkling with merriment as they rested on your right hand, which absent-mindedly sought your bulging pocket, as you dramatically said: "Your Excellency, with my hand on my heart I pledge to you and to the citizens of Massachusetts my reputation, my fortune and my sacred honor to some time in the future sell gas to the citizens of Boston at 60c. per 1000 cubic feet if only you will sign this bill which gives to me forever the power to compel the citizens of Boston to pay $1 per thousand cubic feet?"

Do you recall that day and can you hear the Governor's calmly musical voice as it pealed forth in a sort of drop-that-umbrella-it-belongs-to-the-people-I'm-on-to-your-game tone as he said: "I veto the bill, but if you insert that sacred honor 60c. clause in place of the dollar I'll sign it?" Yes, of course you recollect it, and how, in spite of your blind rage, you put it in, with (in a pale yellow falsetto), "We all must have our little jokes, your Excellency, and I pledge, etc., etc., etc., that the dollar was inserted merely as a joke."

THOMAS W. LAWSON

WITHDRAW SAVINGS—BUY STOCKS

I repeat, I unqualifiedly advise the American people to withdraw savings from banks and buy good stocks. As in the past, I advise only the purchase of regular dividend paying stocks with savings bank deposits, and then only for cash and through Stock Exchange members.

Purchases made to-day will return two or three times the yearly rates of interest now received by savings bank depositors.

Those who have followed my advice during the past six months have likewise received these great benefits.

All such purchases will show large profits in the future.

Bear in mind that for forty years the System's masters, the Rogerses, Rockefellers and Whitneys have borrowed the people's savings at 4 per cent to buy stocks at the bottom and have then returned the people their savings that they might take these stocks off their hands at the top, that they might in turn be juggled out of them when the price is again slaughtered. By this process the people have been kept impoverished while the Rockefellers, Rogerses and Whitneys have piled up uncountable millions.

Illustration. In thirty years Rockefeller has piled up $500,000,000, Rogers $200,000,000 and at the examination the other day Whitney was shown to hold of Standard Oil alone $17,000,000 (William C., Henry M.'s brother). President Roosevelt's exposure in New York last week showed that in eight years Standard Oil had pillaged the people to the extent of $1,000,000,000.

Another illustration: The poor people whom Mr. Whitney said Monday night should not buy stock years ago received $4 each year for each $100 deposited in savings banks and to-day they still receive the same $4, yet the $4 to-day will only purchase necessities and luxuries which could be purchased then for $1.80.

Yet.

One hundred dollars invested in Mr. Whitney's West End road, Gas or New Haven stocks to-day pay from four to eight times as much as then.

Do the savings bank depositors see the difference between Mr. Whitney"s "construction," and my "destruction"?

For years at my own expense I have been telling the people how the game is worked. During those years Mr. Whitney, with his expenses paid from the till of the West End, Gas and New Haven, has been borrowing the people's savings at 4 per cent to play the game. I particularly ask savings bank depositors to attend the meetings which I will hold beginning Oct. 5, at which they will learn many interesting facts concerning how the game is worked.

In the meantime

Beware of System made stocks, such as Boston Elevated, Massachusetts Gas, Dominion Coal, New Haven, etc., for at the gait our President is going his big stick is due in this section soon, and when it arrives it will make some of these investments look like a run-over-by-frieght onion.

WHITEWASH FOR ROAD IN BIG WRECK HORROR

"FAILURE OF MENTAL PROCESS ON PART OF OPERATOR," SUPT. LEE DECLARES.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 25.—"There was a failure of mental process on the part of one or both of the operators. In all my experience as a railroad man I have never known a similar case. I believe that both the operators are absolutely unconscious of having made an error."—General Superintendent Charles E. Lee of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

After an all-day session, the New Hampshire Railroad Commission seems to have agreed that this explanation for the wreck horror at West Canaan will keep public sentiment from boiling over at least for another week, when the alleged investigation will again be taken up.

The feature of the farce probe was the complete whitewashing of the railroad from responsibility for the wreck. The various members of the board had apparently rehearsed their parts well during the ten days which have elapsed since the wreck and every move seemed to be made with a view of avoiding any placing of responsibility, although there were facts connected with the affair which tell a story of mismanagement damaging in the extreme to the railroad.

Finger of Guilt Pointed at Road.

One point was brought out which pointed the finger of guilt at the road management in a statement by Train Dispatcher James A. Browley at Concord, who declared that there was no operator at Enfield, from which station one of the death trains could have been warned of the wreck danger.

That some one connected with the dispatching department blundered at the critical point is conceded by all, but who that person was the board seemed unable to find out.

But overshadowing all that was the negligence on the part of the train officials in placing between two steel frame cars one of an old antiquated type, which, when the crash came, was crushed like an eggshell, causing the deaths of twenty-five and the injury of as many more. This frightful object lesson of mismanagement was scarcely mentioned.

Twelve Hours at Keyboard.

The hearing also developed the fact that at one end of the wire over which the fatal number "30" passed was Train Dispatcher James A. Browley. For eight hours, from 11 o'clock Saturday night to 7 o'clock Sunday morning, it was his duty to send all orders governing trains upon the Concord division of the road. In addition to this he must be prepared to receive and transmit messages from the other divisions.

At the other end of the wire was John S. Greeley, who for seven days in the week was expected to keep going from seven in the evening to seven the next morning without a minute even for lunch. In addition to this he was expected to receive from the night trains mail, express and baggage.

The entire forenoon was consumed in the examination of the train crews of Nos. 30 and 267. In the afternoon opportunity was given to Superintendent Lee to give a dissertation upon the development of the block signal and to defend the road for not installing them upon this line.

Superintendent Lee's Theory.

He said it had been the policy of the management to install them upon the double track lines instead of on the single track lines. Upon the single track lines, when both head-on and rear-end collisions are liable to occur, no such safeguard had been taken.

Superintendent Lee then explained his "mental process" theory, and said:

"Assume that the dispatcher at Concord sent the order correctly and checked it back correctly, as his records show. Then in order to do that, he must have received it wrong and checked it correctly at the same time.

"If the operator at Canaan made no mistake, then the train dispatcher must have made a mistake in sending it and in checking it.

"If both made a mistake, the dispatcher sent it correctly; the Canaan operator must have received it incorrectly and sent it back correctly; then Browley, who had received it correctly, checked it incorrectly."

Knew Crash Would Come.

James A. Browley was then called. "I have been a train dispatcher for six years. For fourteen years previous to that I was an operator.

"On the morning of September 15, the day of the accident, I was at my key in the train dispatcher's office. I was alone. I send order No. 4 to White River Junction, Canaan and East Andover. They were not sent simultaneously as I was unable to get Canaan when I first tried. It was repeated back to me from each station, at 3:38 from White River, 3:39 from East Andover and 3:48 from Canaan.

"Between 4:25 and 4:27 I learned that there was a mistake. I had a message for freight train 267, which I attempted to send it at Canaan. I learned that the train had gone. I asked him where they were going. He said they were going to West Canaan. I said they cannot go to West Canaan. They have only forty minutes on No. 30.

"I told him the trains would come together, and I felt they would. In fact, I knew they would unless something unforseen happened to prevent.

"I tried to get the operator at Enfield. I could not raise him. Then I asked Greeley to telephone West Canaan. I called up General Train Dispatcher Randall and Superintendent Ray and laid the situation before them. There should have been an operator at Enfield."

Train Gone; Message Too Late.

Operator John S. Greeley, of Canaan, then went on the stand. "I have been an operator for twenty-three years," he said. "On September 15 I was on duty at Canaan. I received the order which read No. 30 and recorded it. I repeated it back to Browley and received his O. K. after I had reported 267 out.

"In a few minutes he called me and said he didn't see how they could make West Canaan in forty minutes.

"I said that No. 34 wasn't due at West Canaan until 4:06. They had plenty of time to make that. At that time he said the order should have read 34 instead of 30. That is the first time I knew there was any trouble or any mistake.

"I tried to get the Enfield operator on the telephone, and did get him. He told me thirty had gone. I was sitting in my office all the time. I might not have heard him call me the very first time, but I do not think he means that he called me continuously for eight minutes.

"I do not believe I could have had thirty in my mind—put it down thirty-four. I was wide awake when I took those orders."

The hearing was adjourned to convene again at the call of the clerk, Arthur G. Whitemore, who stated to-night that the next session would probably be in one week.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Ten dollars was voted the striking telegraphers by Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17 last night. The following delegates to the building trades section of the Central Labor Union were elected: John J. Hynes, John F. Kennedy, Alexander Bray, William Doyle, Edward F. X. McCarthy, Owen Decareau and L. W. Duggi. Bert Leavitt was chosen the union's representative on the organizing committee of the building trades section. John J. Hynes and William F. Fitzgerald will represent the union at the State Branch, A. F. of L. convention, to open at Milford, October 1. Three candidates were initiated.

PAINTERS REAFFIRM ACTION.

By an almost unanimous vote, Painters' Union No. 11 reaffirmed its former action to withdraw from the Building Trades Council at a largely attended meeting last night in Dexter Hall, Wells Memorial building. The decision was reached after an hour's session, during which many warm speeches were made. By this action the Building Trades Council loses its largest affiliated organization, and one which has been in the council since its formation eighteen years ago. A peculiar phase of the situation is that John T. Cashman of Painters' Union No. 11 was re-elected business agent of the Building Trades Council last Sunday. No move was made at last night's meeting toward the Painters' Union becoming affiliated with the building trades section of the Central Labor Union, and officers of the union stated that no such action was anticipated, not for the present at least.

AFTER LABOR'S ENEMIES.

To read the names of all Senators and Representatives who voted against labor measures during the last session at every meeting of the union from now until election was the recommendation adopted by Stationary Firemen's Union No. 242 at last night's meeting. A list of those legislators antagonistic to labor's interests will be furnished to each of the members, with the request that all honorable means be taken to bring about their defeat at the polls. It was reported that the firemen and coal passers employed at the Westboro Insane Hospital had received an increase of $10 a month through the efforts of Local No. 242.

AGENTS AID CONDUCTORS.

As a step toward aiding the Street Railway Men's Union in thoroughly organizing the conductors on the Boston & Northern road, the members of Insurance Agents' Union No. 1 voted last night to pay their fares in pennies to non-union conductors when riding on the road. The following committee was appointed to make arrangements for the ball to be held November 22 in Paine Memorial Hall: John Fitzpatrick (chairman), Harry Flint (secretary), Dennis Cronin, John McDonald and J. P. Duffy. It was reported that locals had been formed in Jacksonville, Fla.; St. Louis, Mo., and North Adams, Mass. Ten new candidates were admitted.

$75,000 GIFT CAUSES FIGHT

Undue influence and unsoundness of mind are allegations in the contest of the will of Samuel F. Bird of Framingham, the breaking of which, in the East Cambridge Probate Court, would mean a loss of $75,000 to the American Unitarian Society. Bird, an octogenarian, left a will, which, it is said, was signed on his deathbed. It gave $5,000 to Mrs. Ida H. Ford, his housekeeper; $2,000 to his crippled brother, Frank, and the rest of the estate to the Unitarian Society. Frank Bird, a brother of the testator; Walter H. Bird, a nephew, and Clara M. Bird, a niece, are the contestants. The estate is now in the hands of special administrators.

SPILLANE JURY IS SENT BACK

After vainly trying to reach a verdict since 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the jury in the case of Jeremiah C. Spillane, accused of larceny of $2,500 by Mary Veronica Gill, reported to-day to Judge Crosby in the first session of the Superior Criminal Court its inability to agree, but was sent back for further deliberations.

Abandon Suit to Annul Marriage of Rich Young Man to Poor Girl

Secret Wedding of Society Scion to Pretty Dressmaker Results in Queer Legal Muddle.

Mrs. Paul Livingston Mottelay, whose separation from her husband became public yesterday.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Through papers in a separation suit served by Paul Livingston Mottelay on his wife, a remarkable shattering of the romance of a secret wedding that startled New York society last April has been disclosed.

Young Mottelay made charges in his papers that could not be proved by him and has had to revise his plan of legal attack upon his wife, from whom he parted. He wanted to prove that his wife was already married when he wedded her. But now he admits that it is not true. So does his father. And young Mrs. Mottelay declares the charge is absurd. So the litigation is in a queer muddle.

Previous to her marriage to Paul Mottelay Mrs. Mottelay, then Miss Anna Van Sant, the daughter of an aristocratic but impoverished Brooklyn family, was earning her living as a dressmaker, her establishment being in West One Hundred and Second street. Young Mottelay lived a few doors away. For six months the young couple kept the secret of their marriage, Mr. Mottelay giving as the reason therefore that he had promised his mother not to wed during her lifetime.

Wife Faithfully Kept Secret.

The young wife did as her aristocratic husband desired and faithfully kept their marriage secret, even going so far as to continue the operation of the dressmaking establishment, but when the mother of young Mottelay died she insisted that the announcement be made.

Paul Livingston Mottelay, whose marriage angered his relatives.

This the bridegroom did, and his relatives, who are numbered among the oldest and most aristocratic people of the city, were horror stricken to learn that a member of their own family should so far forget himself as to marry a girl who had to make dresses for a living. Threats of annulling the marriage were heard on all sides, though on just what grounds no one seemed to know, both parties concerned being well over the age limit.

After awhile the murmurs gradually ceased and everybody supposed that the young couple were going to live happily and that the family had been reconciled. Young Mottelay continued to go to his work as a clerk in the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., and to go home to his young wife every evening.

Recently there arose rumors of an estrangement, but it was not until yesterday that any definite facts became public. Investigation developed the fact that young Mottelay and his bride of less than a year had separated, that Mottelay had returned to the family home and that his wife had again taken up her occupation of dressmaker.

Young Mottelay Loquacious.

In discussing the case with a reporter young Mottelay was loquacious. He said:

"Yes it is true I have separated from my wife. While the action I have begun against her is in a very unsettled state, yet I will say that Mrs. Mottelay has been served with the summons."

"Is it a fact that the papers in the case allege that Mrs. Mottelay was already married to Charles H. Norton at the time you married her?" asked the reporter.

"That we have not been able to prove as yet," said the young man.

"If they were married, would not the records show it?" pursued the newspaper man.

"They might have been married in China, or abroad, anywhere. You know how hard it is to trace such things up," he replied.

It remained, however for Mottelay's father, Paul F. Mottelay, to give the final explanation of the collapse of the intended suit.

"Yes, it is true that we are trying to have my son's marriage annulled on the ground of a previous marriage," he said, "but I will have to admit that the case has fallen through. We were lead to believe that this woman was married before, on account of a Board of Health record, in which she is described as being a widow. Mr. Norton was the only one we knew to have been well acquainted with my son's wife, but after searching the records of all the boroughs in New York City we are compelled to admit failure.

Allege He Was Intoxicated.

"The action was started some three weeks ago, and it also alleges that my son was intoxicated at the time of the marriage, and I know that he was. He had drunk several cognacs and coffee and other drinks—something he was not used to—and we feel sure he was not in his proper senses.

"My son is the favorite nephew of Mrs. Ferguson Livingston Cooper of Montclair, N. J. My family is also related to the Livingstons, Van Rensselaers, De Puysters and Van Cortlandts."

Mrs. Mottelay was seen at her present home, where she is engaged in dressmaking. She is a rather slight, pretty, young woman of a blond type. In speaking of her separation from her husband, she said:

"Mr. Mottelay left me without offering any excuse whatever. From the time of our marriage announcement we met with constant opposition from my husband's relatives. They seemed to think it a disgrace because I earned my own living. As far as families go, I can boast of just as aristocratic a family as my husband. So far as earning one's own living is concerned, I see no disgrace in that. I know that, had he been left alone, he would not have left me. I even hope now for a reconciliation and would gladly welcome him back.

"Former Marriage Story Absurd."

"As to my having been married to Mr. Norton, that is absurd. I knew Mr. Norton—was engaged to him, in fact, when I was a seventeen-year-old girl in Brooklyn—but so far as a marriage was concerned, we had never even set the day.

"No papers in the annulment case have been served on me. I was introduced to Paul by a sister of Mr. Norton. Why, at the time I went with Mr. Norton we were both under age, and since then I haven't seen Mr. Norton at all. I am sure that my husband's relatives are at the bottom of this whole thing. They threatened to make trouble for us when our marriage was announced. I shall surely contest any move to separate us or to annul the marriage for any cause."

Mrs. Ferguson Livingston Cooper, the wealthy aunt of the young man, is said by Mrs. Mottelay to be the instigator of the trouble.

Charles H. Norton laughed when he was informed of his connection with the case, and said: "It's all a mistake. I was never married to Mrs. Mottelay or any one else. We were not even engaged. I understand the whole matter has been dropped. I guess some one must have got the dates mixed."

GIRLS SAVE TRAIN LOAD FROM DEATH

WOBURN, Sept. 25.—Grace McGonagle, Mary Ahearn, Mary Devlin and Mary O'Hara, a quartette of pretty shop girls, are to-day receiving congratulations and praise from all over the city for their rare presence of mind and daring in saving a train load of happy theatregoers from being dashed to death in a train wreck near old Harrison avenue bridge on the Boston & Maine railroad.

The girls were returning home from work last evening about 7:45, but were caught in the heavy downpour of rain, and sought shelter under the old bridge. They had been there but a short time when one of them noticed a big telegraph pole had been blown down by the heavy wind and was lying across the tracks in a tangled mess of wires.

They thought immediately of the Boston-bound theatre train which was due in a few minutes, and they lost no time in climbing up the steep embankment to remove the pole if possible. One of the young women secured a lantern, while another made haste to summon aid.

Hugh L. Martin, superintendent of streets, was first to arrive and he found the girls tugging away at the massive timber in an effort to roll it from the tracks.

He had hardly arrived on the scene when the bell of the train was heard, and with one of the girls, ran down the tracks to warn the engineer of the danger ahead. The trainmen were quick to understand the meaning of the frantic waving of the light and the train was brought to a stop. A crew was quickly at work and the pole was removed.

The young women all reside on Harrison avenue.

ALTON ROAD BROKE LAW SAYS LANDIS

Then Grants Immunity and Orders Indiana Head of Oil Trust to Court.

DRAMATIC COURT SCENE

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Judge Landis, in the United States Court, denounced the Standard Oil Company and the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company as members of the "criminal classes." In the most dramatic scene ever presented in his dramatic court, he granted immunity to the railroad.

The Standard Oil Company, through its officials, have attacked the court for its finding in the famous $29,240,000 case.

"Every big shipper in the Chicago district have done just what we have been convicted for doing," said President Moffett of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Accordingly Moffett was sumoned to appear in court next Tuesday at 10 o'clock and testify before the Grand Jury.

The immunity bath for the Chicago & Alton Railroad was simple. United States District Attorney Sims read a statement from the Attorney-General saying that the government had promised immunity and that the road was entitled to it.

Part of Criminal Classes.

In granting the request of Attorney-General Bonaparte, Judge Landis said of the Alton: That it was a part of the criminal classes; that it had been party to a crime; that it had forced its subordinates to falsify its records; that there are now many men in the penitentiary for doing what the road forced its subordinates to do; that this indicated such a state of criminality as to demand the presence of the Grand Jury.

All the Standard Oil counsel present denied knowledge of the Moffett pamphlet upon extended questioning by Judge Landis, who said:

"Among the circumstances that weighed heavily with the court in determining the question what should be done with this railway company, was the keeping of a false record. There are many men in the penitentiary to-day on account of making false entries, such as this railway company obliged its subordinate clerks to make in connection with the books of the company."

ORDER MARKS PRIMARIES OF INDEPENDENTS

Hearst Chosen Committeeman to Succeed Old Leader in Fourteenth District.

CONVENTION TO-MORROW

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—In striking contrast with the riots and arrests which marked the Tammany primaries were those of the Independence League. Quiet and order characterized the balloting for the League's committeemen. There were few contests, and even in these cases the rivalry was devoid of any show of hostility or bitterness.

In most of the districts the old committeemen of the League were re-elected by big majorities. The few changes which did take place were nearly all the result of the resignation of old leaders.

William R. Hearst was chosen the committeeman of the Fourteenth District in place of Ambrose Sutcliffe, retired. In the Twenty-fifth Maximilian Ihmsen succeeded E. S. Toadbine. Michael J. McCarthy was made the new committeeman of the Ninth, and Michael G. Byrne of the Thirteenth.

As the result of the reapportionment of the district, Dennis McEvery was succeeded by Samuel Reid in the First, Judge Palmieri is the new committeeman of the Third, New York, and James Dunn of the Third Kings, succeeding Thomas Gilligan, retired.

Independence League delegates from all of the assembly districts of New York city were elected yesterday to the State convention, which is to be held Saturday at Carnegie Hall.(At that time two men are to be nominated for associate judges of the Court of Appeals. Five or six candidates are already in the field, each making an active fight for nomination. Others are expected to enter the contest before balloting begins on Saturday.

Delegates from the up-State counties have already been chosen, making the total 670.

The Independence League convention for the nominations of candidates for Supreme Court Justices in the Second District, comprising Kings, Queens and Richmond counties, will be held to-morrow evening, at Haviland Hall, Brooklyn.

CHAPTER III.

AS our strange guest concluded my sister and I looked at each other.

"There is only thing to do," said Milissia. "She must stay here until something develops."

On returning to the office I sent a wire to Nome via Chicago and San Francisco, using our direct private wires to San Francisco and the public wire from that city to Alaska.

I asked for full particulars from the girl's father, stating she had reached me.

Although I did not know Zara's writing, and the description of the mysterious young woman who had sent the girl to me was very meagre, I had no doubt she was Zara. Certainly no other woman of my acquaintance was absent from Boston, least of all, none visiting Alaska.

A series of calls at department stores in company with my sister resulted in the presence of a very charming young woman at dinner that evening. Although slightly embarrassed by the sights of a city, for she was a typical Western plainswoman, Miss Knowles, before the evening was over, developed a charming personality, full of originality and spirit. For her father she appeared to have little anxiety. Indeed, from the quietly told stories of hardships endured with him in the West and in Alaska, her father seemed to be a man of infinite resources.

After she had retired to her room my sister and I held a long consultation. Although the young woman appeared to lack baggage, she had an ample supply of money. Her purchases during the day had been sufficient to give her a wardrobe for the entire season. She had insisted on purchasing at least six trunks to accommodate the wardrobe.

"I don't think there need be any question as to who sent her," I concluded; "it must have been Zara."

My sister frowned slightly and bit her lip.

"Zara," she mused, "everything mystifying emanates from that strange young woman, Billy."

"She is the incarnation of the mysterious," I responded.

Get Strange Message.

My sister was silent for a long time.

"She knows you have a sister, doesn't she, Billy?"

I nodded.

"I should like to meet her," she continued.

"You wouldn't understand her, Milly."

"No?" Milissia rose and came to my side;" "but I do understand you, Billy."

"I am going to bed," I retorted quickly, getting to my feet.

The following evening came the answer to my wire to San Francisco. It was as terse as it was amazing in its intelligence.

"No such person as Arthur Knowles known here.—Mackenzie."

"What do you think of it?" I asked my sister, on reaching the hotel.

"I think the man is mistaken, that's all," she replied decisively, "he simply does not know, that's what I think."

I studied the strange message brought to me by the girl.

"Of course, I have no means of knowing whether this is Zara's handwriting or not," I commented, "but who would be in Nome excepting her? Yet, what in the world would she be doing there?"

My sister continued her toilet with silent industry. I knew what that signified.

"Oh come, be decent," I ejaculated.

"Perhaps she is on one of those mysterious missions she doesn't explain," said my sister. "Only, I mean to stand by Hattie in spite of this telegram. I have been with her all afternoon and she is perfectly charming."

"I don't charge her with any imposition," I replied hastily, "for she has asked nothing but protection. Still this wire is curious. You'll admit that, I suppose?"

"I'll admit that your man in Nome does not know if such a person as Arthur Knowles is located in Alaska," she replied, "and I suggest another man might be better informed."

Saw Pallor Spread.

At dinner, our guest proved an entertaining conversationalist. She seemed to be acquainted with most mining camps in the West as well as with the explored part of Alaska.

Listening with the closest attention I noted a momentary pallor spread over her animated expression when in the midst of a thrilling story of adventure on the Yukon. She stared in my direction for the space of half a second and her eyes filled with fear. The agitation vanished as quickly as it apeared.

It had been so transitory that I did not feel warranted nor called upon to speak of it; still it filled me with a vague uneasiness which gave me no rest until I turned in my chair and scanned the faces of the diners at the tables. All were old residents of the hotel and so far as I could observe were attending to their own affairs.

In a mirror set in the wall just directly behind my chair I noted the reflection of a guest seated at a table a little to one side of our table and facing me. He, too, was an old resident of the hotel, but of the ultra conservative, aristocratic clubman type common to Boston. I gave the reflection but a casual glance, noting the headlines of the first page of the BOSTON AMERICAN he was reading and turned back to my own affairs. Certainly Mr. Alonzo Dobson would never be guilty of agitating a young woman from Alaska.

Attributing the apparent agitation to natural causes, heightened in my eyes by my tendency to suspicion, I thought no more of the matter.

EAT WHAT YOU WANT

Science Has Now Found a True Way to Cure Indigestion.

A few years ago, when a sufferer from indigestion went to a stomach specialist, the result was a rigid diet list that almost meant starvation.

By dint of the most patient experiments, science has finally found out that to make sure of good digestion you should eat what your stomach asks for; of course, using moderation.

But the first thing to do in the case of indigestion or stomach weakness is to strengthen the muscular walls of the stomach and intestines, so that they will care for the food that is eaten. In no other way can this be done as well as by taking a Mi-o-na tablet before each meal. This restores strength to the stomach muscles and stimulates the pouring out of gastric juices, so that the food is digested readily and its nourishment retained in the system to build up energy and vitality.

Do not think the sick headache, heartburn, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, spots before the eyes, sleeplessness and the many other symptoms that are the direct result of indigestion, will go away of themselves. The stomach must be built up and strengthened by Mi-o-na before you can be well and strong, free from suffering and distress.

In many of the best homes in Boston and adjoining towns the handy little Mi-o-na tablets, so pleasant to take, yet so effective, have given quick and lasting relief from indigestion and that disagreeable full feeling after eating.

Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere for 50 cents, and we positively guarantee to refund your money should you purchase a box and be dissatisfied with results. Write for free sample, addressing Booth's Mi-o-na, Box 977, Buffalo, N. Y.

BLOOD STAINED MURDER KNIFE FOUND BURIED

Meat Cleaver Also Unearthed, New Clues in Taunton Murder Mystery.

TAUNTON, Sept. 25.—A blood-stained meat cleaver has been unearthed by the police in the Taunton murder mystery and this, together with a bloody knife, which was found in a clump of bushes near the scene of the tragedy, leads the officers to believe that more than one man had a hand in the slaying of John Clakosz, a Polish baker, whose mangled body was found in a shed in the rear of a bakeshop on Jackson street.

The cleaver was found by Lieutenant McCormack buried under a pile of wood in the cellar of the house occupied by Antonie Zylkowich, who is held for trial charged with committing the crime.

The two weapons have been thoroughly examined and it is reported that not only have blood stains been discovered but short hairs were also found on the blades of both cleaver and knife. The dead man had not been shaved for several days and it is supposed that the short particles of hair are from the face of the victim as he was slashed a number of times on the cheek and neck.

An expert has also examined the accused man's shirt and declares that the stains on the arm of it are from blood and not beer as was at first claimed.

A heavy fire brick, also blood stained, has been discovered by the police, who are of the opinion that the murdered man was first hit a blow with the brick and later slashed to pieces.

The widow of the murdered man, who is left with seven children, the youngest two months old, now declares that her husband had $700 in the pouch about his neck when he was killed.

KIDNEY TO RUN FOR THE HOUSE AS LEAGUE MAN

Charles J. Kidney has accepted the House nomination tendered him by the Independence League of Ward 17, and has already promised his support to T. F. Phelan, the League nominee for the Senate.

Mr. Kidney is a well-known resident of the Ward 17 District, and three years ago made a fight for the House, being defeated by the narrow margin of 84 votes.

He is a firm believer in the principles of the League and will wage an energetic campaign from now on. He is opposed to non-residents monopolizing the offices to which bona-fide residents are entitled.

All followers of Lanergan in the district, which comprises Wards 9, 12 and 17, will support Mr. Phelan on the grounds that he is a legal resident of Ward 17 and entitled to the support of all fair-minded citizens.

Rich Bride and New Post Won By the Daring of a Poor Lieutenant

Mrs. Francis A. Ruggles, daughter of Henry Cleveland Perkins, who was married after a brief but romantic courtship. Now her husband is Military Attache at the U. S. Legation in Venezuela.

Lieutenant Ruggles, who broke engagement to wed Miss Perkins.

Young Soldier Nursed by a Millionaire's Daughter Broke Engagement with Another Girl to Wed Her.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—From an obscure second lieutenant of cavalry, Francis A. Ruggles, son of the late Brigadier-General Ruggles, has jumped into the lucrative post of military attache. All because of the good luck following a daring "stunt" of taking a ditch on his horse, which resulted in the officer obtaining a broken shoulder, incidentally a millionaire bride. Thus was his name brought before the powers in Washington.

Lieutenant Ruggles and his wife, formerly Miss Mabel Perkins, daughter of Henry Cleveland Perkins, a world renowned engineer, are well known in New York society. The young officer's appointment to be United States military attache at Venezuela and other South American points has just been announced.

His father got the boy into West Point. He graduated, went to the Philippines and catching the war spirit of his father, distinguished himself there. Coming back to the United States he went with his regiment, the Fifteenth Cavalry, to Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.

There he entered into the gay garrison life and became engaged to Miss Edith Hoyle, a society belle of Atlanta, Ga.

A few months later, while riding a dangerous mount, the young man, despite the protests of a brother officer, First Lieutenant Clifton Norton, now of the Fourteenth Cavalry, took a dangerous ditch. His horse missed and he was carried to the post hospital, with a broken shoulder. He got leave of absence and went to the home of his mother in Washington and there met Miss Perkins.

She turned nurse. In three weeks their engagement was announced. The Hoyle-Ruggles match was declared off and in two months Washington witnessed a big wedding.

Then the young soldier's record began to be remembered. He got minor details and then Henry Cleveland Perkins, his father-in-law, was called to South America on business of several years' duration.

Political wires for the young officer began to buzz. His millionaire father used a word here and there and finally the young officer was named as military attache at the Venezuela and other South American legations.

AGED AERONAUT MAKES RECORD AERIAL VOYAGE

CONSTANCE, Baden, Sept. 25.—Count Ferdinand Zeppelin, the German aeronaut, to-day made the most successful aerial voyage yet achieved in any dirigible balloon. He spent four hours and seventeen minutes in the air, completely circumnavigating the Lake of Constance and passing over five different States.

The speed of the airship is estimated to have been at least thirty-eight miles an hour. When both motors were in operation it easily outdistanced the numerous steamers laden with observers that followed on the lake.

Count Zeppelin, who is sixty-nine years of age, was in command of the airship. He had with him two assistants and a crew of seven men to run the motors.

The airship executed the most diverse evolutions with the greatest ease. It paraded back and forth before the windows of the Royal Castle at Friedrichshafen, making the turns on a very small radius, and coming down the homeward stretch, it ascended or descended at the will of the pilot, at times dipping into the water, and then rising to a height of 600 feet.

The balloon used to-day is on a rigid frame 420 feet long. It holds 11,000 cubic metres of gas.

Count Zeppelin was enthusiastic over to-day's work, and intends to make another ascent to-morrow.

$2,000 ENDED STARTLING SUIT AGAINST PELL

Revealed By Lawyer Who Aided Opera Singer Accusing the President's Cousin.

ATTORNEY DEMANDS HALF

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Theodore Roosevelt Pell settled the $25,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Alma Robert, the opera singer, last Winter. He settled it with a paltry $2,000 bill.

That fact became known after the "Four Hundred" of New York and Philadelphia had been wondering for months why the suit against the President's cousin had been so suddenly silenced. The settlement became public because Miss Robert's lawyer, Julius Michael, wants half of the $2,000, and, unable to get it from his client, has brought suit against her and Mr. Pell.

Miss Robert, in the height of her anger and rage against Mr. Pell last winter, declared that he had "swan-songed" her with Swinburnian poetry and such affectionate titles as "Lamp of Love" and "Heart of a Thousand Joys."

But more than this name-calling, Miss Robert charged he had written her many and many a letter which would ostracise him from the famous Cramp family into which he is married and from all the high caste in Philadelphia and New York as well—if he ever forced her to make these documents public.

Mr. Pell paid the $2,000, it is said, in preference to having the letters read in court. Now Mr. Michael says he will produce them on his own account unless Miss Robert—or Mr. Pell—pays him.

Mr. Michael says that when he took up the Pell suit for the concert singer it was agreed between him and his client that she should pay him half of whatever "surcease" she should secure.

The bill of particulars that the two of them got out against Mr. Pell, he declares, would have forced him to any settlement rather than let it appear in court. Miss Robert had proof, according to the lawyer, that Pell had wooed her as a single man; that he had kept her in ignorance of his previous marriage to Miss Florence Cramp, the heiress of the great ship building fortune, and that he proposed wedlock to the concert singer in such a whirlwind of written poetry, love letters, vow and promises that society throughout the whole country would sit up in amazement if it heard the whole story.

A dainty chiffon veiling evening dress in the palest of pale blues is also very effective. The trimming is of valenciennes, the sleeve double kimono cut and the cut Empire Princess. There is another light blue, a mousseline, with Cluny trimming, also cut Empire Princess.

The skirts of the evening gowns are cut circular flounce, the prevailing style is the Empire Princess and the leading colors are pale pink, white, pale blue, rose and apricot, the latter two being in new shades.

Respect to Parents Is the First Thing for Girls to Learn

By Beatrice Fairfax

PRINCE WILHELM OF SWEDEN when talking to me expressed his admiration of the American girl in most glowing terms.

If he could have heard a girl talking to her mother in the tones that I overheard the other day I fancy that he would have decidedly qualified his judgment.

It was painful to listen to the girl's conversation, and if she could for one moment have appreciated the very poor impression she made on every one who overheard her I am sure she would mend her manners in future.

Every time the mother opened her lips the girl contradicted her.

The mother was a gentle, timid-looking woman dressed in shabby black: the daughter a bouncing, self-sufficient young person, who looked as though she spent all the money she could scrape together on her person.

Daughter's Debt

THE daughter owed a lifetime of love and devotion to the mother, and all she gave her was impatience and disrespect.

She even looked as though she were ashamed of the poor, shabby little mother with the patient face and work-worn hands, the mother who had brought her into the world and guarded her with love and care through all her childhood.

I want to tell you one thing, girls, and that is that you need never feel proud of yourselves for showing your parents love and attention.

You are simply doing your duty in trying to repay some of the love that has been lavished on you.

If you have young brothers and sisters you can gain a fair idea of how much your mother did for you in your youth.

Do you realize how her head and heart and hands are never at rest? From morning till night the demands on her time and sympathies are increasing.

You go to bed and sleep soundly until morning, but don't imagine that your mother does, tired as she is after the day's work.

Half a dozen times through the night she is out of bed bending over some little cot. She never gets a sound night's rest.

And she has not had a restful day nor a perfect night's rest for years. Think of that—not days, but years!

And as time goes on and the children grow up how it must hurt the mother to have them speak to her in curt, disrespectful tones.

The mothers do not ask much—they only want love and attention.

And you must give it to them, my girls; you must learn to appreciate what wonderful, beautiful, self-sacrificing lives the mothers lead.

Downward Step

EVERY time you speak disrespectfully to your mother you take a step downward.

The American girl is very charming and pretty and sweet, but she is not as deferential and respectful toward her elders as she should be.

I have seen a girl of sixteen lounge back in a comfortable chair when an elderly person entered the room.

In France, England or Canada such conduct would be considered most ill-bred, but here it does not seem to cause much comment.

That, of course, is the fault of the parents. If children are trained to be polite to their elders they will grow up courteous and well bred.

Sometimes, however, the overworked mother of a large family has not much time to devote to training.

If you have not been taught to show respect to your elders, begin now to cultivate the habit. And whether you have been taught or not, nothing will excuse lack of devotion, respect and consideration in your treatment of your mother.

Sleep Is the Best Preserver of Youth

SLEEP is a great preserver of youth. Eight hours at night and a short nap during the day will do much to keep the face free from wrinkles.

Always sleep with the bedroom window open a few inches at the top, both in Summer and in Winter.

A daily morning bath, tepid in Winter and cold in Summer, with a brisk rub to follow, will keep the skin fresh and clear. Two hours must be spent in the open air, walking, riding or playing games.

All tight clothing, and especially tight lacing, must be avoided, as compression disturbs the circulation and is often the cause of enlarged veins and red noses.

A celebrated woman who was famous even in her old age for her beautiful, clear complexion and freedom from wrinkles was once persuaded to tell the secret of her youthful looks.

The answer was simple. Abstinence had been the rule of her life. No tea, coffee or stimulant of any kind.

To keep well, drink lemonade or water, eat apples, grapes and figs regularly. Take the raw juice of a lemon every day. Never fail to walk regularly. Bathe frequently.

PRETTY COMBINATION

PONGEE color with trimming of brown makes one of the prettiest combinations of the season and is so youthful in effect that it suits young girls peculiarly well.

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

HAVE a small, wide-mouthed jar in the bathroom to hold the odds and ends of soap, and when three-fourths full fill the jar with boiling water, add the juice of a lemon and a teaspoonful of glycerin and you will have a pleasant "jelly" with which to whiten and soften the hands.

Crumb stale cake in a small dish and mix well with a quantity of Paris green. Moisten with a little water, set the dish where the ants bother, and they will disappear. You must be very careful that there are no children likely to get hold of this, as it is deadly poison. We were greatly troubled with ants, but now scarcely ever see one after using this recipe.

The water filter must have an occasional cleaning, and one of the best preparations is a solution of permanganate of potassium. Dip a small brush in the solution and go over every atom of the surface after washing with hot soapsuds and thoroughly rinsing. Should some small amount of the solution remain after several rinsings it is not injurious. A cheap filter can be made from a large new flower pot thoroughly cleansed, with the hole in the bottom covered with a piece of clean, new sponge, held down by a layer of coarsely powdered charcoal covered with a layer of clean sand with a top layer of coarse gravel and stones. This will filter the water as successfully as an expensive apparatus.

Are French Girls Most Fascinating

FRENCH girls are very fascinating, but not pretty. English girls are very pretty, but not at all fascinating," said an American the other day.

"I have just come back from France, a country I often visit. But on this occasion I made a special study of the French girl from fifteen to twenty; and I find that the French maiden is a most fascinating person.

"She is very quiet and ladylike. She never laughs or talks loudly in the streets. There is nothing rough or hoydenish about her.

"The young daughter of the middle and professional classes in France dresses in the most quiet and modest manner out of doors. Work girls, clerks, typists and all who earn their own living invariably dress in black—trim, neat and smart, but never conspicuous.

"Their shoes and stockings are nice and dainty, however poor they may be.

"The French factory girl, milliner and waitress is a model of smart, quiet neatness. She behaves in the street like a high-born lady, has the prettiest manners, is smiling, pleasant, but never bold or loud.

"If she can afford a gown costing only a few cents a yard she manages to save money to have her corsets specially made for her, and no French girl of any class would dream of going about the street with bare neck and arms.

"The true charm lies in quiet, womanly gracefulness. The girl who fascinates and attracts any man worth attracting does so through modesty, delicate mindedness and refinement."

MUSTARD PICKLE

TWO quarts small cucumbers, two quarts green tomatoes, two quarts small onions, one quart green peppers, two heads cauliflowers. Cut vegetables quite fine and boil in salt and water until tender; drain and put in crock. Take one large cup flour, one gallon vinegar, one and one-half pounds sugar, one-half pound mustard, one-half ounce tumeric, to color. Mix dry ingredients together with part of the vinegar. Heat the rest of the vinegar and stir in the mixture. Boil until it thickens, stirring all the time, and turn over the vegetables while hot. If desired, large pickled cucumbers may be cut in small pieces and added to the pickle when done, instead of using the small cucumbers. If only the flavor of the onion is desired, three or four onions cut fine with the vegetables may be used instead of the button onions. This pickle is delicious. A. G. SUMNER.

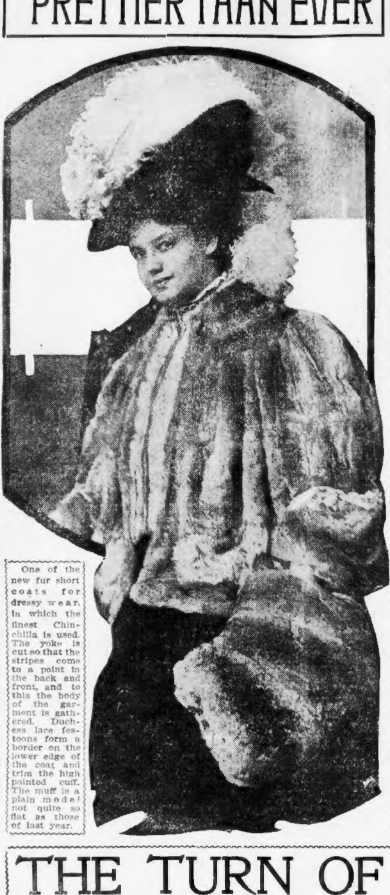
THIS WINTER'S FURS PRETTIER THAN EVER



One of the new fur short coats for dressy wear, in which the finest Chinchilla is used. The yoke is cut so that the stripes come to a point in the back and front, and to this the body of the garment is gathered. Duchess lace festoons form a border on the lower edge of the coat and trim the high pointed cuff. The muff is a plain model not quite so flat as those of last year.

THE TURN OF THE BALANCE

A Thrilling Romance of American Life---By Brand Whitlock

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

AFTER a long while an ill-natured guard, whose face had grown particularly sinister and vicious in the business, ordered Gusta to follow him, and led her back into the building.

Reluctantly he unlocked doors and locked them behind her, and Gusta grew alarmed. Once, waiting for him to unlock what proved to be a final door, he waited while a line of women, fourteen or fifteen of them, in uniform of striped gingham, went clattering up a spiral iron stairway; two or three of the women were negresses.

They had been down to the services some Christian people had been holding for the inmates, preaching to them that if they believed in Jesus they would find relief and peace and happiness.

These people, of course, did not mean release from the workhouse, and the peace of happiness, it seemed, could not come until the inmates died.

So long as they lived their only prospect seemed to be unpaid work by day, bread and molasses to eat and a cell to sleep in at night, with iron bars locking them in and armed men to watch them. However, the inmates enjoyed the services because they were allowed to sing.

Multitude of Voices

After the women disappeared, Gusta stood fearfully before a barred door and looked down into a cell-house. The walls were three stories high, and sheer from the floor upward, with narrow windows at the top.

Inside this shell of brick the cells were banked tier on tier, with dizzy galleries along each tier. Though Gusta could see no one, she could hear a multitude of low voices, like the humming of a bee-hive—the prisoners, locked two in each little cell, were permitted to talk during this hour. The place was clean, but had, of course, the institutional odor.

The guard called another guard, and between them they unlocked several locks and threw several levers; finally, a cell door opened—and Gusta saw Archie come forth. He wore a soiled, ill-fitting suit of gray flannel with wide horizontal stripes, and his hair had been clipped close to his head.

The sight so confused and appalled Gusta that she could not speak, and the guard, standing suspiciously by her side to hear all that was said, made it impossible for her to talk. The feeling was worse than that she had had at the police station when an iron door had thus similarly separated her from her brother.

Archie Talks

Archie came close and took hold of the bars with both his hands and peered at her; he asked her a few questons about things at home, and charged her with a few unimportant messages and errands. But she could only stand there with the tears streaming down her face.

Presently the guard ordered Archie back to his cell, and he went away, turning back wistfully and repeating his messages in a kind of desperate wish to connect himself with the world.

When Gusta got outside again, she determined that she would not go home, for there the long shadow of the prison lay. She did not know where to go or what to do, but while she was trying to decide she heard from afar the music of a band—surely there would be distraction. So she walked in the direction of the music.

About the workhouse, as about all prisons, were the ramshackles of squalid poverty and worse; but little Flint street, along which she took her way, began to pick up, and she passed cottages, painted and prim, where workmen lived and the people she saw, and their many children playing in the street, were well dressed and happy. It seemed strange to Gusta that anyone should be happy then.

When suddenly she came into Eastend avenue she knew at last where she was and whence the music came; she remembered that Miami Park was not far away. The avenue was crowded with vehicles, not the stylish kind she had been accustomed to on Claybourne avenue, but buggies from livery stables, in which men drove to the roadhouses up the river; surreys with whole families crowded in them; now and then some grocer's or butcher's delivery wagon furnished with seats and filled with women and children.

The long yellow trolley cars that went sliding by with incessant clanging of gongs were loaded; the only signs of the aristocracy Gusta once had known were the occasional automobiles, bound, like the Sunday afternoon buggy riders, up the smooth, white river.

Eastend Parade

Eastend avenue ran through the park, and just before it reached that playground of the people it was lined with all kinds of amusement pavilions, little vaudeville shows, merry-go-rounds, tintype studios, shooting galleries, pop-corn and lemonade stands, public dance halls where men and girls were whirling in the waltz.

On one side was a beer garden. All these places were going noisily, with men shouting out the attractions inside, hand organs and drums making a wild, barbaric din, and in the beer garden a German band braying out its meretricious tunes.

But at the beginning of the park a dead line was invisibly drawn—beyond that the city would not allow the catch-penny amusements to go.

On one side of the avenue the park sloped down to the river; on the other it stretched into a deep grove.

The glass roof of a botanical house gleamed in the sun, and beyond, hidden among the trees, were the zoological gardens, where a deer park, a bear pit, a monkey house and a yard in which foxes skulked and raccoons slept, strove with their mild-mannered exhibits for the beginnings of a menagerie.

And everywhere were people strolling along the walks, lounging under the trees, hundreds of them, thousands of them, dressed evidently in their best clothes, seeking relief from the constant toil that kept their lives on a monotonous level.

Only One Alone

Gusta stood a while and gazed on the river. On the farther shore its green banks rose high and rolled away with the imagination into woods and fields and farms.

Here and there little catboats moved swiftly along, their sails white in the sun; some couples were out in rowboats.

But as Gusta looked she suddenly became self-conscious; she saw that, of all the hundreds, she was the only one alone. Girls moved about or stood and talked and giggled in groups, and every girl seemed to have some fellow with her. Gusta felt strange and out of place, and a little bitterness rose in her heart. The band swelled into a livelier, more strident strain, and Gusta resented this sudden burst of joyousness. She turned to go away, but just then she saw that a young man had stopped and was looking at her.

He was a well built young fellow, as strong as Archie; he had dark hair and a small mustache curled upward at the corners in a foreign way. His cheeks were ruddy; he carried a light cane and smoked a cigar. When he saw that Gusta had noticed him he smiled and Gusta blushed. Then he came up to her and took off his hat.

Unwelcome Visitor

"Are you taking a walk?" he asked.

"I was going home," Gusta replied. She wondered how she could get away without hurting the young man's feelings, for he seemed to be pleasant, harmless and well meaning.

"It's a fine day," he said. "There's lots o' people out."

"Yes," said Gusta.

"Where 'bouts do you live?"

"On Holt street."

"Oh, I live out that way myself!" said the young man. "It's quite a ways from here. Been out to see some friends?"

"Yes." Gusta hesitated. "I had an errand to do out this way."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

VERY NEGLECTFUL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady twenty-two years of age, and have been going out with a young man to whom I am practically engaged, although I have not received the ring. What worries me is that when he is alone with me he seems very fond of me, but when away from me I really do not think he gives me a thought. Recently I went to the country for a month and wrote him very promptly. He answered about three days after, explaining that he had so many engagements he did not get an opportunity to write. He started on his vacation this morning, and last night telephoned that he was too busy packing his valise to call and wish me good-by. He did not go to business all day yesterday, and I therefore think he might have given me a few moments of his time.

Shall I answer his letters while he is in the country, or shall I have nothing more to do with him? I have always thought a great deal of him, but recently his coldness worries me.

J. M.

I THINK he is very neglectful, and the wisest thing you could do would be to break the engagement. He should have written to you more promptly, and his failing to bid you good-by was inexcusable. My advice may seem harsh, but it is better to break with him than to have him treat you coldly and later force you into the step you would now take of your own free will.

RUNNING A RISK

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl eighteen years old, and am keeping company with a gentleman seven years my senior. We intend to get married when I am older. We love each other very dearly, but he has a jealous disposition and an awful temper. If he sees me speaking to any fellow I know he tells me I have no right to talk to him. I get angry and then we have a quarrel. The other night we went out together, and a young fellow whom I have known for years spoke to me. Of course I stopped and talked to him. My friend got jealous and walked away. I said good night quickly to the other fellow and went after my friend. He told me if I wanted other fellows that it would be better for us to part. I, knowing he was in the wrong, told him I thought it would be beter for us also. I have not seen him since then, but I have received a letter from him asking my pardon, and asking me if I wouldn't go with him again.

Now, Miss Fairfax, will you please tell me if I would be right in going with him again, and would it be safe for me to marry him, knowing he has a jealous disposition and a bad temper, while I also have a hasty temper?

M.

YOU would stand small chance of happiness in marrying a man who was both jealous and bad tempered, the more especially as you say that you also have a hasty temper. Think it over very seriously, and unless he can promise to control his jealousy and temper I think it would be much wiser for you to remain apart.

Expert Tells How to Keep Baby Healthy As Cold Days Come

WITH the first touch of cool weather the baby's Winter starts, and every mother should at once take such steps as long experience has shown proper, that the child may safely pass through the cold weather. Dr. L. A. Doroff, of the Nursery and Child's Hospital of New York City, an expert on the question, has kindly furnished the Home Page with valuable information regarding the care of babies for the cooler days to come. Mothers might do well to cut out and save this article for handy reference.

By Dr. L. A. Doroll

A WARM and tight-fitting woolen shirt should always be worn, one for day and one for night. It should have long sleeves and cover the neck and chest snugly. All petticoats should be supported from the shoulder and not by waist bands. It is particularly important that the little one's feet should always be kept warm.

Clothing

The abdominal band—one should ALWAYS be worn—should be adjusted sensibly, not too tightly. It should be from three to four inches wide, and not a half a foot or nine inches, as many mothers seem to think. Always fasten it in the back snugly with safety pins just snug enough so that it will not slip up.

"Mothers come to the hospital," says Dr. Doroff, "with bands a foot wide, which, as they adjust them, are of more use as chest protectors than as abdominal bands."

All night clothing should be about the same as day. Common sense will govern the taking off or putting on of extra garments as the temperature is higher or lower.

The child should be accustomed to changes of temperature by the opening of the windows of its room two or three times during the day, which, of course, should be done in any event for ventilating purposes.

Any healthy child of a month or more can be taken out on any pleasant day, when the wind is not strong, in the Fall months. During the mid-Winter the little one, if it be six months old, can safely and with good effect be taken out on any nice day when the temperature is not lower than 20 degrees.

Food, Good and Bad

NO child under a year old should ever be given milk straight, potatoes, bread or cereals, or any other solids. Babies are seen every day on the East Side with crusts and pieces of zwieback in their fists. Mothers should be warned against this.

Overfeeding is worse than underfeeding. Many cases of indigestion grow from foolish overfeeding of little children. If the baby wakes up the easiest way to quiet him is, of course, to feed him. He doesn't need it, but is naturally glad to get it. He can't think for himself. His dietary programme must be figured out for him by his mother. If his regular feeding time has not arrived she should do anything else rather than feed him to keep him quiet. Sometimes he is only thirsty. If more mothers knew that a little sterilized water would satisfy the crying infant they and their posterity would be better off. Just boil the water and give it to the baby. It need be hardly warm when he drinks it, but never cold.

Here is a list of foods forbidden to children under four years taken from Dr. L. A. Holt's book on the subject of the care of children:

All meats, such as ham, sausage, pork, corned beef, liver and bacon; all vegetables such as potatoes, onions, celery, radishes, beets, cucumbers, tomatoes, etc.; all hot breads, rolls, griddle cakes, sweet cakes, candies, pies, nuts, jellies and preserves; coffee, tea, beer, wines and cider.

Foods to be allowed a healthy child from three to six years of age: Milk, cream, eggs (soft boiled or poached)—never fried; meats such as roast beef, lamb, mutton chops (all cooked rare); white meat of chicken; vegetables, asparagus, spinach, stewed celery, string beans, fresh peas—all well cooked; any good cereal; meat broths and beef juice; any of the plain desserts, like custard, rice pudding (without raisins), ice cream, oranges, baked apples, stewed prunes, peaches, pears and grapes, when thoroughly ripe and fresh.

A child at one year can have orange juice, beef juice and a little cereal. At eighteen months it can be put on a regular diet of bread and milk, soft boiled eggs, beef and orange juice and oatmeal or good cereal once a day.

A rule to establish the quantity of liquid food to give the baby until he is a year old, if he is being brought up on the bottle, is to provide just an ounce more than his age in months: if he is three months old he gets four ounces; if four months old he gets five ounces and so on.

The rule in America is to feed the little one ten times in twenty-four hours. This schedule is followed for the first three months, the feedings being two hours apart. After that eight feedings are sufficient. In Germany, the feedings are made every four hours.

A good thing is to give the child a drachm of malted milk to an ounce of water three times a day, always after a feeding.

Peptonized milk is good to be used when the baby has indigestion.

Any mother can get good advice in special cases from any of the children's hospitals.

Baby's Sleep

A HEALTHY child should sleep from sixteen to eighteen hours a day for the first six months. From then on to a year he ought to sleep eleven or twelve hours at night and two or three in the day time; two years, thirteen or fourteen hours; four years, eleven or twelve hours; six to ten years, ten to eleven hours; ten to sixteen years, nine hours.

Valuable Don'ts

DON'T rock baby to sleep. It is a habit which he will fall into quickly. It isn't necessary. He will go to sleep just the same if he is not taught to expect it.

One of the fads of parents which physicians protest against most vehemently is clothing their little legs in short socks that leave the limbs bare from above the knee almost to the ankle.

This should never be done, even in midsummer, according to these authorities, and to have the legs of children bare in chilly weather is little short of criminal. Long, warm stockings should be kept on the children the year round until they are old enough to be proof against the chills to which bare legs render them subject.

Use common sense. Don't wrap the baby up like a bundle and don't put too many clothes on him. See that his feet are warm and that the abdominal band is properly adjusted. Feed him enough and not too much, and he'll get along all right. As for exercise, nature will provide for that.

Teach your child to clean the teeth morning and night.

Teach your child to eat slowly.

Teach your child to stay in the sunshine and fresh air.

Never allow your child to sleep in a warm room, but in one with a window open, Summer and Winter.

ORNAMENT SPONGE BAG

NOT very decorative is the ordinary sponge bag in a plain or checked waterproof material, so many housekeepers have ornamental outer coverings made. These should be of washable materials, either linen or crash, and can be worked with the words "Sponge Bag," done in plain black or in old English, with a little scroll effect underneath. This lettering can be done either in a double outline, filled in with a fine seeding, or cross stitch can be substituted. Use a mercerized cotton in red or old blue.

TO RENOVATE FELT HATS

HATS may be renovated by dipping a piece of black material in a little liquid ammonia poured into a small basin of cold water and gently sponging the hats all over. They need not be made really wet. Hang in a warm place and brush occasionally as they dry. You can almost fancy you have new hats.

SCOURING POWDER

A GOOD scouring powder is made by mixing equal parts of powdered pumice stone and some good soap powder. Put in a shallow bowl and place in a convenient spot. You will find it easy to use and it gives good results.

PRIEST, MYTH WHO MARRIED PAIR ON BOAT

Search Vain for "Father L. H. Griffin," Who Figures in Whitney Bigamy Case.

CERTIFICATE IS MISSING

FARMINGTON, Me., Sept. 25.—Persons interested in the bigamy case against C. Carrol Whitney have returned from Boston, where they went to search for the mysterious "J. H. Griffin," a minister whom Miss Melvina Boleau, wife No. 1, says performed the marriage ceremony and signed the certificate to which her signature and that of C. Carrol Whitney were attached. The city and suburbs were thoroughly searched, but no trace of "Father Griffin" could be found. However, several Griffins were found, one of whom is a Catholic curate of the Star of the Sea parish in East Boston. He is said to be well known in the vicinity of the Franklin Wharf, where the steamer Bay State, on which Miss Boleau claims the ceremony was performed, berthed. Father Griffin told the searchers that he knew absolutely nothing of any such marriage, and believed that he was impersonated by a bogus clergyman.

Miss Boleau says that in July, 1904, C. Carrol Whitney introduced her to "Father J. H. Griffin," and that shortly after the introduction the party of three went aboard of the steamer Bay State, and that Griffin performed the ceremony making Whitney and herself man and wife.

Certificate Gone.

She said her husband took charge of the marriage certificate, which was subsequently destroyed. She had never seen "Griffin" before nor since. Griffin, according to her story, was rather shabbily dressed, smooth faced, and that Whitney paid him $2 for the services performed. A few months ago she heard of her husband's marriage to Miss Justine Ripley of West Farmington, and on her complaint and evidence, he was recently held on the charge of bigamy. Those who have been searching Boston for some trace of "J. H. Griffin" purchased several marriage certificate blanks while in Boston in proof that they are easily obtainable. The trial begins this week.

DRESS HATS LARGER THAN EVER THIS YEAR

Extraordinary Exhibition of Parisian Headdress at Gilchrist's.

An extraordinary display of fine Parisian headdress is on exhibition at Gilchrist's, Washington and Winter streets. The dress hats are very much larger this year than they have been in a long time. The crowns are higher and the brims are much broader.

The flowers used in trimming are unusually beautiful this year. A popular flower, seen at Gilchrist's, will be the Easter lily form, in black and white. This is combined effectively with the rose, of a larger size than has been seen lately, and with orchids and morning glories.

A stunning hat at Gilchrist's, just brought from Paris, is of a dark olive shade, plush form, high crown and great brim, with huge spreading wings. The band and wing colorings are Japanese in form and color.

A novelty in hats is the slightly rolling broad brim, which is distinctly unconventional. A splendid creation is an 1830 type, with very high crown and broad brim, sloping far back.

This store makes a specialty of its French styles and patterns, just arrived from Paris, but has some handsome domestic and tailor-made hats. The display of the Burgundy shades is set out in a handsome way in the millinery department, in hats of numerous forms, but all conforming to the general style described, which will prevail this Fall.

FOUND EARLE NO SOCIALIST

BETHLEHEM, N. H., Sept. 25.—Harry A. Goodwin of Brockton, Mass., working at his trade here since last May, declares that in his recent interview with Artist Ferdinand Pinney Earle, of soul affinity fame, at the home of the Kuttners, where his second intended lives, he was misrepresented.

Mr. Goodwin says that there is no organized Socialist party in Bethlehem. He says that he is a member of the party in Brockton, and that when he heard Earle styled a Socialist he determined to see for himself if that was the case. He was not closeted with the artist, but sat on the piazza of the Kuttner home, and there, he says, he found out that Earle was by no means a Socialist.

AMES TAKES NO PART IN FIGHT

Congressman Butler Ames of Lowell is taking no part in the Essex County District Attorney contest.

In town to-day, "on business," the Lowell Congressman asked the political reporters to print this statement for him, and to make it as strong as they knew how.

"People who are un-friends of mine," said Mr. Ames, "are trying to make it appear that I am throwing what they are pleased to call my strength in favor of one of the candidates. I am doing absolutely nothing in the matter."

Roosters Employed to Drown Virginia Harned's Sweet Voice

Virginia Harned, whose sweet voice has brought the wrath of her neighbors down upon her head.

Angered Neighbors Take Novel Means to Halt Actress's Daily Rehearsals.

Health Board Appealed to, and Case May Now Be Aired in Courts.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—People who have eagerly parted with two dollars for the privilege of sitting behind a post in the parquet to hear Virginia Harned play "Anna Karenina" will be amazed to learn that unappreciative neighbors of the actress have imported a galaxy of crowing roosters to drown out her voice at rehearsals.

Yet that is the gospel truth; and, what's more, they've appealed to the Board of Health because they say the roosters failed of their mission.

Miss Harned lives in West Sixty-ninth street, and although her "Anna" has been playing for some three weeks now at the Herald Square the star still believes there is more to be got out of the part than she has yet achieved. So she practices sounding the Dantean depths daily in her rear bedroom.

Walls as Sounding Boards.

This bedroom overlooks the rear yards of a great many nice people who live along West Sixty-Eighth street. The open window, with the encompassing walls doing duty as sounding boards, produces a fine megaphonic effect.

Miss Harned has a voluminous voice, and when she searches her soul in the effort to put more emotion into "Anna" the back yards seem to rock.

One of the neighbors has a poultry farm on Long Island. But first he said he would head a group to call upon Miss Harned and ask her to please confine her characterization of a doubtlessly delightful part to the interior of the Herald Square Theatre.

Miss Harned defended herself, pleading the value of art, and intimated she would continue the exercises.

"On your head be it," replied the chicken fancier, and two days later a freight car load of lusty plymouth rocks was distributed about the backyards that form the Harned bedroom landscape.

Miss Harned appealed to the Board of Health. The roosters, she declared, violated the city laws of sanitation and must be taken out or she would carry the case to the highest courts.

The neighbors also appealed to the health board. Heaven forgive them, they called Miss Harned's flight of oratory a "nuisance."

The actress has not rehearsed in her bedroom since. And the health board is still trying to decide about the removal of the roosters.

NEBRASKA COMES OUT IN FAVOR OF TAFT

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 25.—In the report of the committees on resolutions of the Republican State Convention, Secretary Taft was indorsed as follows:

"We recognize in the honorable William H. Taft of Ohio a man whose personal character and whose long public service marks him as pre-eminently the man, and the Republican party may again meritand and receive the approval of the national electorate."

TWO MEN PAID FOR MEAL WITH BULLETS

The police to-day are seeking two colored men whom Albert Hewett, a restaurant keeper at No. 135 Dartmouth street, says fired two shots at him when he demanded pay for a meal. The story told the police is that the colored men ordered suppers at Hewett's restaurant and after eating went out without paying. Hewett and an assistant went after them and say two shots were fired at them. The colored men then ran away. A crowd chased them for several blocks before they disappeared.

NEW FLUFFY RUFFLE HAT IS POPULAR

Houghton & Dutton's Specialties in Women's Headgear Attract Attention.

ARTISTIC COMBINATIONS

One of the specialties shown at Houghton & Dutton's, at Tremont and Beacon streets, is the original fluffy ruffle hat. The indications are that these dainty creations will be much worn, particularly since they can be had at a very reasonable price. They are in soft shapes, trimmed with the white soft boas and a little dash of color of the more subdued kind.

The new trimmed hat department in this store is a novelty here. It furnishes a convenient retiring place for those seeking headgear of the better type. Many beautiful specimens of the latest thing in hats are displayed. A very attractive hat is one of those Copenhagen blues, with large, extreme shapes and with a great variety of treatment.

Another popular color is the Vatican purple, with corresponding colors in trimming. Still another prominent type is in the soft leather browns.

A variety of the more attractive feathers are used, such as turkeys, birds of paradise, ostrich and many fluffy, fancy feathers. Flowers are very prominent in the trimmings, such as roses, orchids and the like. The trimmings all go to large effects, including huge bows of various shapes and rose combinations of ribbons and velvets. The color combinations are extremely artistic, shades being much in evidence, but being of the more subdued types.

A CONVALESCENT'S SAD CONDITION

Attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism Left Sufferer With No Appetite—Skin Peeled and Hair Came Out in Bunches—Bed Sores Developed—All Treatment Failed Until

A TRIAL OF CUTICURA PROVED SUCCESSFUL

"About four years ago I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I was taken very ill and was soon in a high fever. I did not leave my bed for four months, and during three of those months I could not move voluntarily, the pain was so intense. My skin peeled, and the high fever played havoc with the lustre of my hair, which came out in bunches. I also had three large bed sores on my back,—two on the shoulders and one at the waist. I could have cried the first time I saw myself in a mirror. I had lost fully thirty-six pounds, and looked like a consumptive. I did not gain very rapidly, and my appetite was very poor. When I was able to get around, I had all my friends advising remedies, and all guaranteed 'sure cures.' I tried many, but they were of little help, and until I tried Cuticura Resolvent I had had no real relief. That gave me such an appetite that I felt half starved about all the time, and I immediately began to gain in weight, my complexion cleared, and I felt better. The bed sores went very soon after a few applications of Cuticura Ointment, and when I used Cuticura Soap as a shampoo and Cuticura Ointment as a massage, my hair began to regain its former glossy appearance. I am really all made over, and cannot say enough for the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Lavina J. Henderson, 138 Broad St., Stamford, Conn., March 6 and 12, 1907."

If unadulterated ball luck can win the pennant then put your money on the Tigers, as they certainly have the fortunes of diamond war very much in their favor, judging by the way they got away with the first game with the Pilgrims yesterday.

To be sure, the Tigers are a gilt-edge aggregation of ball tossers and play the game from the bottom up, but there's little chance for the local boys as long as they are outlucked.

Few will dispute the fact that the Tigers intend taking at least two out of the three games they play here, and possibly clean them all up. At the rate they are moving they look too big a 'proposition for the Hub warriors.

What will drive the Tigers to the limit is yesterday's results, which puts them on even terms with the Athletics in the race, and it will be hard stopping them from trying to break away from the Quakers.

McGuire's men cannot afford to lay down any. The team is just as good as the Tigers' makeup, so far as material goes, but they are playing for a different prize and the incentive is not as great.

The stellar but uncertain combination representing the Hub is likely to do the unexpected, and that is one reason why the fans trot out to the grounds in big numbers to be there when it happens. But the biggest influence is the attraction of a team like the Tigers, playing the only kind of pennant ball which thrills the real fans.

It will be Glaze or Pruiett to-day to earn the distinction of breaking up the slump and taming the Tigers. Young was feeling so good that he was sent in to greet the frisky beasts yesterday, and got a clawing which will last him for a while.

The youngsters may spring a surprise, and they certainly can't acquit themselves worse than the veteran department. Mullin, the heavyweight pitcher, will probably slant them over for the Tigers.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Even up for the lead now, the Tigers will rush it in earnest.

Hughey Jennings is a side show himself, and there is never a dull moment while he is on the lines.

Wagner was decidedly off in his throwing. Unglaub saved him a couple of errors by grand stops.

Lord, the Providence third baseman, will play the third sack this afternoon, which will mean the moving of Parent to short.

Manager McBreen has arranged a game at Rockey Point next Sunday between the Cleveland team and the Pilgrims.

The local fans remember Ty Cobb well. He was given the hand when he stepped to the plate the first time.

The second time up, Cobb got the ball where he wanted it and away to the right field it went, taking but one hop to the wood, and netted a run, as Ferris relayed the ball wild to third.

The next time up he fooled the fielders by laying down a nice bunt, and it was too slow even for Freddy Parent to handle clean.

"Now Davey," was Jennings's greeting when Jones came to the bat. Davey responded three times with safe hits.

A peculiar play that, when Schaefer took his base on a passed fourth ball and was nailed trying for second while O'Leary was a few feet from the plate with the run. It was the third out.

Whiteman, the new recruit, was seen for the first time in action when he batted for Young in the ninth, but did not shine, as he went out on strikes.

Shoddy Shaw did a little timely batting, as he knocked in two of the runs made by the locals.

BIG ENTRY OUT FOR LEXINGTON STAKE RACES

Special to the Boston American.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 25.—The entry list for purses at the coming Fall meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association are all in, and while Secretary H. W. Wilson will not give out a complete list of the entries for several days yet, sufficient is known to state that the events filled fully up to all expectations and that in these races are entered all the best horses that have so far raced this season on the Grand Circuit and elsewhere throughout the country.

The classes closed were the 2:05, 2:08, 2:10, 2:12, 2:14, 2:16, 2:19, 2:20, 2:25 trotting, and 2:00, 2:05, 2:07, 2:08, 2:10, 2:12, 2:13, 2:14, 2:15, 2:17 pace.

The paid up starters in the three-year-old Futurity will be announced when these entries are given out in full by the association. In the Futurity it is known that such crack three-year-olds as Kentucky Todd, 2:08¾, General Watts, 2:09¼, Belle Bird, 2:11¼; Ashland Wilton, 2:17½; Douglas, 2:12¼, and Blue Hill, 2:15¾, have paid up to date. Never before did this event see a meeting between two colts with records under 2:10.

The Transylvania has among its entries many sensational horses, including Highball, Sonoma Girl and Sliko, while the Tennessee has a great array of side-wheelers, all the stars in fact of the season.

With good weather, Secretary Wilson looks for the race record to be broken in the Futurity, as well as the Transylvania and Tennessee, for the track this season is faster than ever before. The buildings and grounds are being cleaned up, painted and whitewashed, and everything overhauled. By the opening day, October 8, the plant will present an appearance second to no track in all America.

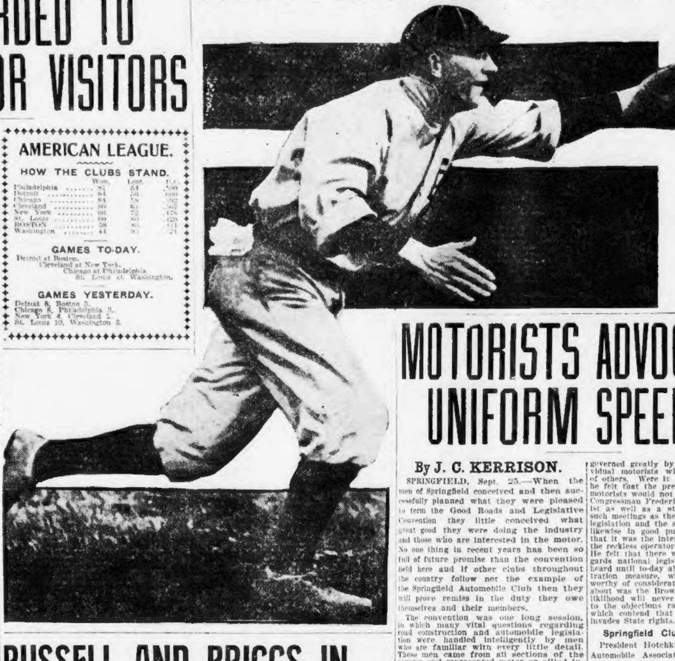
TYRUS COBB, STAR PLAYER OF TIGERS



Here is the man who has been a great factor in helping the Tigers in the pennant race this season. He is the leading batter in the American League.

RUSSELL AND BRIGGS IN HOT BOUT IN CHELSEA

The members of the Winnisimmett A. C. saw a rattling bout last night when Unk Russell of Philadelphia met Jimmy Briggs in the main bout of ten rounds. There was not a second during the whole distance when the crack pair of lightweights were not tearing into each other, and the terrific pace was apparent in nearly every round, as each was obliged to slow down perceptibly from the fast action indulged in when the bell rang for each session.

It was evident that Russell had a slight shade on Briggs, but it was not a gap of any size. Russell was pronounced one of the best boys of this weight ever seen here and he certainly made good by his aggressiveness and two-hand fighting. He handed out some powerful right crosses to Briggs's jaw, but they never stopped Jimmy from boring in and landing heavily on the body. It's a cinch that the Quaker will be sore around the body for a few days from the constant pounding of Briggs's fists.

Russell scored often with straight lefts and right crosses, but he was off in his range and missed a lot of speedy ones which would have done some damage had they reached home.

The boys fought at catch-weights and Russell had all the advantage in height, making it difficult for Briggs to reach for the jaw, so he paid all his attention to Russell's body and planted wearing punches on the kidneys. Jimmy used Russell's neck for a chopping block every time his foe was bent over in a clinch, and there was a lot of sting in the blows.

In the first round the boys mixed freely, Briggs trying to get in close and do execution at close quarters, while Russell waded in, aiming for the jaw with left or right wherever he saw an opening. Russell's ruggedness as a fighter came to the front as the bout progressed, as he took Briggs's short body jolts without showing effects. He kept swinging for the jaw and in the seventh round got one over which dazed Briggs and he slipped to the mat, but was up again in an instant without taking any of the count.

Briggs appeared the stronger at the finish and in the final round did most of the forcing, trying to land a solid punch, and evened matters up considerably.

In the first preliminary Young Smily and Young Brooks hammered each other around the ring for four rounds, when the referee stopped the bout as the former was getting too much of a lead. Henry Meirs of Charlestown bested Young Murray of Lynn in six rounds.

SPORTING NEWS SUMMARY.

FOOTBALL.

The Tufts football squad again appeared on the field yesterday at Medford and was given a hard afternoon's work. The first game of the season is with Dartmouth on October 5. Two new men reported, Chase, the tackle on last year's freshman team, and Dulroy, who was on last year's freshman and second teams. These are important additions to the old men already out.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 25.—In spite of the soft ground on University Field from the heavy showers, the football squad went through the practice with great snap. The coaches had three teams working in different parts of the field. Beside the regular coaching staff, Walter Foulke '05 was on hand to coach the backs. The practice consisted mainly in developing the kicking department of the game. Wister, last year's all-American end, and Brown were paired off, and were practiced in getting down the field under punts.

WORCESTER, Sept. 25.—The Holy Cross season opens today with a game here with Norwich University. Coach Larkin will be forced to put a light team against the husky boys from Vermont. Murphy of Lynn will fill McClellan's place at guard, and Triggs of Brockton will play tackle in place of Palotti. The lineup will be: Captain O'Donnell, l. e.; McNight, l. t.; Murphy, l. g.; [illegible], c.; Sweeney, r. g.; Triggs, r. t.; Daly, r. e.; [illegible], q. b.; Knight, l. h. b.; Burke, r. h. b.; [illegible], f. b.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 25.—The Yale football squad has been strengthened by the addition to it of two of the most valuable members of the freshman squad of last season, Brown, who played in the freshman rush line last Fall until he got behind in his studies and was disqualified, and Reinecke, the star tackle on the freshman team last Fall. Both learned to-day that they have passed off their scholarship conditions and can play football. It had not been expected that either of these men would be able to play this Fall. Brown is a star guard and Reinecke a [illegible], and both will stand excellent chances to win places on the varsity team this Fall. They fell behind in their studies last Fall and had practically passed out of notice.

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 25.—Fifty men reported to Coach O'Connor for football practice. All but two of the veterans, Stearns and De Angelis, are back on the field. [illegible] is given its first tryout Saturday against Norwich. Captain Glaze expects that there will be ninety men on the field by the end of the week. Every train brings a few new candidates.

BOXING.

PERCY COVE, the Seattle featherweight, is anxious to meet Al Delmont, and the bout will probably be arranged by one of the local clubs.

BILLY CONARTY, the Cambridge lightweight, is matched to box "Spike" Robson at Newcastle, England, October 7.

"[illegible]" O'BRIEN and Johnny Dwyer will meet in New York October 2.

SAM LANGFORD and Jim Barry will clash to-night in a New York ring.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Joe Humphries, manager of Sailor Burke, says that he is willing to have Burke fight Bob Fitzsimmons or any middleweight. The sailor's experience with Jack Johnson has cured Manager Humphries of hunting for honors in the heavyweight division.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—When Jack Robinson of Chicago and Sailor Brown finished a ten-round engagement at the Consolidated A. C. to-night Robinson had gained a lead which earned him the decision by a wide margin. Walter Stanton, the California welterweight, made a splendid showing in defeating Guy Ashley of Fall River, Mass.

YOUNG DONAHUE'S bout with Dave Deshler, which was to take place at the first meeting of the Cooper A. C. next Monday night, has been postponed on account of an operation on Donahue's jaw.

JOHNNY MOONEY, manager of Billy Mellody, wants to match the welterweight champion against "Unk" Russell. If Mellody will make 145 pounds ringside he can have the match, so states Billy McCarney, manager of Russell.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Sam Langford's friends to-day wagered nearly $5,000 that he will knock out Jim Barry of Chicago before the conclusion of their six-round bout at the Sharkey Athletic Club to-night. They were compelled to offer 1 to 5 to get their bets placed.

THE PROPOSED BOUT between Matty Baldwin and Tommy Murphy, which was to take place next Monday at Brooklyn, has been called off, as the pair could not agree on the weight.

AT THE MEETING of the Winnisimmet A. C. of Chelsea next Tuesday night the bouts, which will be between New York and Boston boxers, will be as follows: Jimmy Walsh vs. Babe Cullen, Charley Hughes vs. Micky McDonough, Young Miers vs. Willie Schumacher, Young Mason vs. Joe Wagner.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Walter Christie, the famous auto racer who was badly hurt in Pittsburg two weeks ago, was brought home last night, accompanied by Mrs. Christie and William Pickens. Christie lives in River Edge, N. J., but it was not thought advisable to make a further journey than this city. Mr. Christie is at the Cadillac Hotel, where he will remain until he is able to be moved again.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The question whether the United States should be represented on the "Rules of Golf Committee" was to have come before the business meeting of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, held at St. Andrew's to-day, Horatio Gordon Hutchinson having given notice of a motion to authorize the committee to invite the American Golf Association to appoint a representative. This motion, however, was withdrawn at the last moment, and the American Association will be invited only to forward suggestions for the consideration of the committee in revising the rules.

COLUMBUS, O., SEPT. 25.—Aileen Wilson captured the King stake for 2:06 pacers at the Grand Circuit meet after Dan Patch had taken the first two heats. The Wilson mare did not figure in the heats won by the Patch mare, but took the third, fourth and fifth in brilliant style. Dan Patch hung on gamely in the third and fourth miles, but was beaten. Jennie W. was the favorite.

PRESIDENT JAMES E. SULLIVAN of the A. A. U. yesterday appointed Elwood J. Coffey of New Haven, Ct., handicapper for the State of Connecticut.

CAPTAIN DANIELS HURT.

The Brookline High School football team is without an active leader at present, as Captain Billy Daniels, halfback on last year's team, seriously injured his knee yesterday. It now seems probable that Daniels will be unable to play in the opening game with Roxbury Latin School Friday afternoon on Griggs field, Brookline.

TWO GAMES AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Cold weather, for the first time this Fall, caused a break in the major league's schedules yesterday, when the second game of the Chicago-Philadelphia series was postponed. Chilly lake breezes sent the temperature down to fifty-six degrees at 1 o'clock, and the local players decided that such weather was not fit for baseball. The teams will play two games to-day.

SCHOOL GAMES TO-DAY.

MOTORISTS ADVOCATE UNIFORM SPEED LAW

By J. C. KERRISON.

SPRINGFIELD, Sept. 25.—When the men of Springfield conceived and then successfully planned what they were pleased to term the Good Roads and Legislative Convention they little conceived what great good they were doing the industry and those who are interested in the motor. No one thing in recent years has been so full of future promise than the convention held here and if other clubs throughout the country follow not the example of the Springfield Automobile Club then they will prove remiss in the duty they owe themselves and their members.

The convention was one long session, in which many vital questions regarding road construction and automobile legislation were handled intelligently by men who are familiar with every little detail. These men came from all sections of the country and represented motor or allied interests.

This convention stands apart as the first of its kind in the history of American motoring. No less than nine States, representing 25,000 motorists, were represented among the delegates and speakers.

Good roads were thoroughly discussed at the morning session, which was presided over by Harry Fisk. Then after lunch at the Worthy as the guests of the local club the delegates returned to the Cooley, Dr. W. R. White doing the honors as the presiding officer.

Legislation Considered.

Legislation in all its forms, beauties, efficiencies and evils were considered at considerable length. President Hotchkiss of the A. A. A. came out flat-footed against racing on circular tracks and yet favored such contests as the Vanderbilt, when the course is properly guarded. Daniel F. Gay of Worcester, who opened the legislative side of the conference, told of some local experience with the automobile law. Mr. Gay recited the experiences of motorists in the towns of Leicester, Gardner, Holden and other towns, in which the tendency was once to persecute rather than prosecute those who drive motor cars. He urged the enactment of law providing for the carrying of lighted lanterns on all vehicles using the roads and highways at night.

Senator William P. Hayes, ex-Mayor of Springfield, threw several flashes of light on State automobile legislation. The matter of automobile legislation he felt was governed greatly by the acts of the individual motorists who violates the rights of others. Were it not for the individuals he felt that the present antipathy against motorists would not have been engendered. Congressman Frederick H. Gillett, a motorist as well as a statesman, recommended such meetings as the present, not alone for legislation and the same use of roads, but likewise in good public opinion. He felt that it was the interests of all to see that the reckless operators should be suppressed. He felt that there was little to say as regards national legislation. He had never heard until to-day about the national registration measure, which he believed was worthy of consideration. The bill he knew about was the Brownlow bill, which in all likelihood will never become a law, owing to the objections raised by certain States which contend that the proposed measure invades State rights.

Springfield Club Congratulated.

President Hotchkiss of the American Automobile Association congratulated the local club in blazing the way for such conventions as the one here.

He believed that racing has a great deal to do with promoting perjudice, and for that reason he is not only opposed to it, but will do every thing in his power to prevent it so long as he may be president of the A. A. A. Racing he believes has a tendency to make the public imagine that all motors are speed machines. He believes that not two per cent of the motor owners drives insanely on the road, and that not two per cent of the foreign chauffeurs drive sanely. He was decidedly opposed to the creation of intercity records which always result in violation of the speed law.

President Hotchkiss said the best motor law in the country is that of Connecticut; the most copied is New York, the most efficient that of Massachusetts, the most pernicious that of New Jersey, the most illegal that of Ohio. In conclusion the speaker told of the so-called Terry bill, calling for a national registration law, which is perfectly legal and does not interfere with the State right as a motor in going from one State to another is virtually in the same relative position as a train going from one State to another. The Terry bill calling for uniform regulation of motor speed, he said, was to be introduced to the Legislatures of the States in the union, and it is hoped will be adopted by the majority so that a uniform speed law may be secured without appealing to the national House.

Other speakers along the same lines were Frank B. Hall of Worcester, Ernest Howard of Springfield and X. P. Huddy of New York.

CHAMPION GANS READY FOR BOUT WITH MEMSIC

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 25.—Joe Gans is not losing any sleep over the outcome of his fight. Nolan had him worried at Goldfield, but that was the last time the dark Simoon did any worrying.

Benny Selig, Joe's manager, dropped in from San Francisco yesterday and lost no time in getting out to Arcadia. He was very much pleased with Gans's condition.

"This is not going to be any Britt affair," said Benjamin The Wise. "This Memsic is a tough nut and we knew it all right enough. That Britt thing was a kind of joke in a way. Looked like a man should have stolen money to bet on Gans in that fight. Now don't think that Joe underestimates Memsic. In a way, it is a lot better that this fight comes off after the Britt affair. Had Joe fought Memsic before Britt he would have kept the other engagement in mind and gone easy with his hands. With nothing else in sight from now on, and with his mind made up to retire, Joe can afford to wade in and punch with this fellow."

Gans has practically ceased work and is resting easily, with the weight problem well in hand. There has been no worry as to Gans's condition. The champion has made the weight easily, has trained well, and is in perfect condition. The weight, 135 pounds, will put him in the ring at his very best, and he will have no excuses.

George Memsic was feeling so good and was so satisfied with his condition yesterday that he announced, when he arrived at his training hall at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, there would be no more work for him, outside of his road work, unless he commenced taking on weight. His condition is superb, and he has confidence to overflowing. He weighed 134¼ yesterday.

Jim Jeffries, as referee, will visit the fighters daily from now on and see to it that each man is properly weighed each day.

Notes of the Boxers.

Kid Herman, who since his defeat by Gans has been in obscurity, has started training. Not with the immediate object of re-entering the ring, but to fit himself for his sparring bout with Adam Ryan at the Siler benefit. Nate Lewis, his manager and a good judge of fighters, declares Herman works better than ever before.

Joe Dunne, the crack Eastern featherweight, who is here under the management of Jack Epstein, was to-day matched to meet Young Sharkey at the next Indianapolis show. Dunne carries a stiff wallop in either hand.

The East is making quite a fuss over Packey McFarland, the rising young lightweight of Chicago. And why shouldn't they? Packey has done everything asked of him so far, having fought some forty odd fights, all of them being victories. Such work is certainly worthy of praise.

Monte Attell, the brother of Abe, beat Young Molen in three rounds at Sacramento, Cal., last week. The lights were put out at the beginning of the last round and after waiting five minutes the fighting was resumed. Molen went down for the count from a punch under the heart and was out for thirty minutes. Young Ketchell refereed the bout and was given a great reception.

Frankie Neil arrived in Frisco last week and says he wants to fight Battling Nelson or Jimmy Britt. The bantamweight looks heavier than usual and says he is feeling in fine shape. The reason he didn't fight in the East was because there was no certainty as to just when he would be matched with a good man, so decided to go to California to secure a fight.

The moving pictures of the Britt-Gans fight probably will be doomed to a place in one of the 5-cent theatres, as neither Gleason nor the two principals care about putting them on the road. The unsatisfactory ending of the fight has shown the interested parties that it would be foolish to attempt to gather any money on the road with the films. Had Britt knocked Gans out the pictures would have been good for a vast amount of money. But miracles are few, even in the fighting game.

Teddy Murray, who manages Tony Caponi, has asked the Goldfield Athletic Club to match his man with Young Peter Jackson. Jackson is in Goldfield at present and recently won two fights there by the knockout route, Morgan, Williams and Terry Mustain being the victims.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan is much dissatisfied over the manner in which arrangements are proceeding for his bout with Bill Squires, and stated that it was only the hope of getting a return go with Tommy Burns which made him enter the match. He defeated Burns two years ago in Los Angeles. Sullivan objects to Billy Roche as referee, and consented unwillingly to have him as the third man in the ring. He stood out strongly for Referee Welch, who officiated at the Gans-Britt affair. The influence of the club promoters was too strong, however, and he was overruled.

Billy Nolan, who has looked after the interests of Battling Nelson in all his fights in the West, is now negotiating with George Ketchell. Nolan wants to serve as Ketchell's manager, believing that he is the coming factor in his class. It is said, however, that Ketchell has personal objections to Nolan and that "Spider" Kelly probably will attend to his business affairs.

Tony Caponi, who has fought Papke twice to a standstill, wants another chance at the Spring Valley wonder.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 25.—"Three straight" is the cry of the Reds for the third and final game of the series and the last one of the season with the Doves.

The Bostons have proven easy picking for the home talent so far, and Manager Hanlon thinks they will be just as soft in to-day's battle.

In their former series here the Bostons weren't able to win a game in this city, and it looks as though they wouldn't get a look in in the present series either.

The Reds are playing fast ball these days, all teams looking alike to them.

Pat Flaherty, the star Southpaw, will probably pitch for the Bostons to-day, while Bob Ewing will most likely adorn the rubber for the locals.

WILD BELL IS NO "QUITTER"

Wild Bell, the brown gelding in the stable of DeRyder that won the 2:12 trot at Columbus in a field of fourteen starters and earned a record of 2:08¼, is one of the number of California horses invading the Grand Circuit this season.

While this was his initial victory of the circuit, yet from the very start he raced very consistently, though called a "quitter" on the coast, having each race secured a division of the purse, which means a good deal when it is considered that he has been meeting such trotters as Sonoma Girl, Tempus Fugit, Margaret O., Wilkes Heart, Beatrice Bellini, Jack Leyburn, etc., week after week.

It takes a really stout-hearted trotter to race against such horses so continually, be strung to the limit and always beaten by something laying over him in speed in class, and not sour on the game, which Wild Bell has not shown any inclination to do.

Wild Bell was sired by Wildnut, out of Bell Bird (1), 2:26¼, ex-champion yearling trotter, by Electioneer, and is now six years old.

TOM GRAYDON TO HELP INSTRUCT HARVARD TEAM

There are now fifty-eight men trying for the Harvard varsity football team.

The latest addition to the list of coaches is Tom Graydon, the big fullback of the 1901 and 1902 teams. He should be of great assistance in instructing the candidates for the backfield, as in his day he was considered one of the best line-breaking backs in the country, and was generally picked for the All-America eleven.

Among the players out for the first time yesterday were Starr, who has played at end and quarter for three years; Newhall, the regular quarter last year, and McDonald, one of the regular ends last year.

When Burr, guard, and Pierce, tackle, report for practice, which they are expected to do any day now, the varsity men will be all on hand, and Head Coach Crane will be able to pick a provisional team.

Captain Parker of the varsity eleven has picked Nate Hall as coach of the freshman football team.

KILL TRUSTS, FOLK TELLS DEMOCRATS

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 25.—Governor Folk of Missouri delivered an address on "Democratic Ideals" here to-night at a banquet of the home-comers at the Tennessee State Fair. He said:

"The prospect for the success of the Democratic ideals was never brighter than now.

"The elimination of special privilege is the paramount issue before the people of this country—the special privilege of lawlessness; the special privilege conferred by law and the special privilege of monopoly.

"Any privilege is a graft, whether it be a privilege exercised contrary to law or one that the law itself may give.

"A tariff so arranged as to create monopoly and give to a few people the privilege of preying on the rest of the people is legalized graft.

Three Bottles of Wine "on the King of Siam."

And a Horrible Load on the Backs of Wretched Millions.

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

Saturday, September 21, was the birthday of King Chulalongkorn.

That king—Siam is his kingdom—decided that human beings ought to be happy on his gracious, important birthday, and he decided that they SHOULD be happy, even if he had to pay them to make them happy.

He happened to be in Homburg, fixing up his royal health and amusing himself, when his birthday arrived. So he invited all of Homburg to celebrate with him.

He arranged for a steady flow of humble beer to be kept up at his own expense throughout the three days of celebration. He invited all of the citizens, big and little, to rejoice with him, and for each separate one he provided three bottles of wine, one of champagne, one of red wine, and one of ordinary white wine. For some time in advance the authorities were busy bringing in the wine by the carload from out of town.

After it is all over, there will be a good many headaches in Homburg, the King of Siam will feel that he is a very important and admirable person, and those around him will praise him and express the hope that he may live forever.

But he won't live forever, and while he lasts it is interesting to point him out as a sample of the thing which is disappearing, but which was once universal.

To find this royal squandering of money now we must turn to a Chulalongkorn, or other queer potentates from out-of-the way corners.

We know that the money which he throws away in Homburg is ground by taxation out of wretched creatures living on dried fish and rice. We know that this hotel bill for three thousand dollars a day, and the two hundred and fifty thousand dollars that he distributed among German beggars in honor of his birthday, come from people poorer than the poorest in Germany.

We reflect with horror on the fact that the opium traffic, with its five millions of annual taxes, and its horrible stories of suffering and degradation, lies behind this beautiful "birthday celebration."

What this little Siamese ruler does to-day brings only laughter or a sigh. But once all human beings were governed and taxed by such creatures. The French were ground under a brute, who built Versailles with their money and filled the park drives with salt or sugar that a woman who pleased his fancy might have a sleigh ride in July. That was worse than Chulalongkorn's free beer and free bottles of wine. The French Revolution silenced THOSE sleighbells.

Chulalongkorn of Siam and his two brothers and his twenty half-brothers belong to a constantly dwindling class of human beings. THEY still can compel all men in their country to work three months in the year for them for nothing. They can still tax the wretched creatures living in little houses that float on bundles of bamboo on the river above and below Bangkok.

If a half-starved wretch catches two fishes the King can take one or both of them if he wants them.

But even in Siam things are changing. Europeans are beginning to control, taxes grow less severe and human beings, little by little, are recognized as animals possessed of certain rights at least. Homburg should be deeply interested in those three bottles of wine and the free beer, for it has enjoyed a spectacle that will soon be seen no more on this earth.

The future Chulalongkorns will have to learn to weave mats or catch fish like others. Human beings have learned that the world was made for THEM, for all, and not for a few at the top.

If Some Railroads Can Do It, Why Not All?

It Is a Pleasure to Compliment Those That Refrain from Killing Their Passengers

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

When a newspaper tells that some railroad has killed one, two, ten or a hundred human beings, the occurrence, so frequent, attracts little attention. The relatives of those that are dead realize what it means; the rest of the population, hardened, seems almost indifferent to the long list of killings.

It is a pleasure to point out the fact that two railroads in this country, at least, are setting a good example in the way of care and safety.

The Erie Railway has not killed a passenger in fifteen months—and that is saying a good deal for an American railroad.

The Long Island Railroad, which carries millions of human beings—one of the most crowded and, because of the sudden development of Long Island, one of the most inadequately equipped railroads in the country—has a record even better than that of the Erie. The Long Island Railroad compares in safety and management with any railroad in the world. It is probably the best in this country.

We are glad to give these two railroads credit for the fact that they carry passengers home safely, that they apparently spend the necessary money to run their roads with relative freedom from accidents.

We should like to ask, on behalf of the people, WHY OTHER RAILROADS CANNOT DO THE SAME.

Safety is a matter of money and intelligence. The railroad men of America are not lacking in intelligence, and there is no lack of money in this country. The trouble is that the practical working railroad manager is not allowed to spend ON THE RAILROAD AND FOR THE PUBLIC a fair share of the money that the railroad brings in.

Many a railroad manager is blamed, when the blame should really rest upon the selfish railroad gamblers—the men who water the stocks, who make a railroad pay profits on tens of millions never spent.

The watered stock, the greedy promoters, account for overworked men, too long hours, lack of safety devices.

If any of our public officials cared to do so they could prove by the comparative safety of such roads as the Long Island and the Erie that the extraordinary numbers of railroad killings are nothing else than murders. Every one of these deaths on the railroads, with very few exceptions, represents merely money put in somebody's pockets that should have been put into the railroad.

The people ought to have strength of character enough to impress this upon the big men at the top, instead of contenting themselves with blaming the smaller men—the railroad managers—that are not responsible.

HOW THE WOMEN DO LOVE HER!

All in One Day's News

By C. Q. Quincy

WASHINGTON—Aroused by the shipping of 1,000 unmarried women on board one Atlantic steamship, the Unmarried Women's Protective Association is about to open a strenuous campaign for a heavy tariff upon possible wives. It seems unfair to the ladies of the association that they should have to compete with Europeans.

* * *

THE HAGUE—The peace conference has been a pronounced social success, eighty-nine dinners having been given without a single fight. While no resolutions of great importance were adopted, large quantities of tea were drunk by the delegates. War was found to be too unpleasant a topic for discussion in a purely social gathering, and the fact that few references to fighting were made contributed to the success of the conference.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS—A large collection of animals has been turned loose in the canebrakes of the State. Two pigs, rendered wild by a pinch of snuff placed on their noses, await the spear that knows no brother. A fine bear, grizzled with a pair of curling tongs, is ready to join the others laid low by the bullet that is ignorant of the existence of an uncle. Several cats, carefully instructed to act as bobcats, are ready to be treed. A dozen alligators, trained to stand rifle fire, will pose as targets. The Rev. William J. Long and Ernest Seton Thompson will not join the hunting party until later.

* * *

PARIS—The King of Siam, who bought drinks for a whole town on his birthday, has been pronounced as big a fool as the civilized ones.

* * *

SEATTLE—The captain of the Australian steamship Miowera reports that he discovered a new island in lat. 28, long. 92. He was about to effect a landing and hoist the Australian flag when a storm came up and forced the Miowera to continue her course.

LATER—The captain of the steamship Dingbat, from Manila, reports that the supposed island was Secretary Taft.

NEW YORK—A captive loon has been added to the Aquarium.

PITTSBURG—Referring to the above dispatch, none of this city's prominent families has missed a son.

PEKIN—A Chinese parliament is to be established, which will give the Chinese even greater opportunities of washing dirty linen in public.

What Anti-Trust Legislation Does

(From the Springfield Union)

AS a result of the shoe machinery legislation early in the year it is said that the United Shoe Machinery Company of Beverly and Boston will soon put an entirely new line of machinery on the market, utilizing patents hitherto held in reserve.

The competition resulting from the new law is likely to be beneficial to the shoe industry, and all indications tend to bear out the contention that such legislation was needed.

Flossy Clothes and the Stingy Husband

By Winifred Black

WELL, well!

Now the playwrights are getting after women for extravagance in dress. I wish I were Rachel Crothers or some other woman with brains enough to write a play myself.

I'd have an extravagant woman for a heroine, too—and contrasted with her I'd have the nice, economical dowdy, whose husband neglects her to pay attention to the lady with the gorgeous clothes.

I'd make my heroine go to a party in her fine clothes—for which she owed the merchants and the dressmakers and the jewellers and the bootmakers—and I'd have her surrounded with a crowd of men who would spend the next morning at breakfast grumbling about the bills which their own particular wives had been doing their very best to keep down.

What was that old poem about the eagle which was shot by the arrow tipped with a feather plucked from his own breast, and who was it who used to moralize about the kid seethed in his own mother's milk?

I never hear a man railing at the extravagant dress of women without thinking of that poem and that story about the kid.

Consistency!

IT'S all very well to preach, gentlemen.

We all know that economy is one of the first virtues, but, oh, prithee, ye who prate so loud, remember that consistency is a jewel, too.

If you love to tell your wife or your sister or the little niece you're trying to impress with your wisdom how naughty it is to spend too much money for good clothes, the next time you take her to a party do not pick out for your marked and assiduous attentions the most extravagant and the most richly dressed woman in the room.

If you are fond of telling your wife that pink is too young for her anyway, and that the blue dress she wore last season will do just as well this year as a new one, don't stare after the lady in pink the next time you take your wife to the theatre in her poor litle shabby blue frock.

Man's Way

IF you hate big hats and like to make fun of them, don't sit in the street car and gaze enraptured at the person in a skyscraper with a pagoda for a trimming.

It isn't conducive to the peace of mind of your feminine foe.

Now, I don't care a snap for clothes myself; if I had my way I'd dress in a Mother Hubbard and a pair of slippers the year round, but somehow the men of my family wear a peculiar look of uneasy wonder if I present myself before their critical gaze in a frock that is the least bit different from the very latest thing worn by Mrs. Extravagance, who lives for her clothes.

Poor Mrs. Extravagance, we all have such a lovely time talking about her and her clothes.

I wonder who the particular man is for whom she goes into such disgraceful debt?

A Girl That's Popular

By Wex Jones

THERE'S a girl you all know; you see her every day—
She's a sad girl; she's a glad girl; she's grave and she's gay;
She's a rich girl; a poor girl; a flip girl; demure girl;
She's a slim girl; a trim girl; she's my girl; she's your girl;
She's thin and she's fat; she's a peach and a cat;
She's dressed to the nines; she wears naught but a hat;
She sits by the sea; she's pouring out tea; she's golfing; she's boating;
She's walking and talking and diving and floating;
She's freckled and fair; she's half of a pair;
She's all by herself with a glassy-eyed stare;
She's all girls in one; she has every known face;
She's been pictured and pictured in every known place;
She's a popular miss, and she has lots of lovers—
The girl that you see on the magazine covers.

Little Editorials from the People

WHO KNOWS THE AUTHOR OF THIS?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The "Conundrum That Zadig Guessed" is very interesting, and shall preserve same. It recalls a bit of philosophy I heard some years ago, but of which I never knew the author's name. Will some kind reader of the AMERICAN give name of author of the following:

"Time is the cradle of hope, the grave of ambition, the solitary counsel of the wise and the stern corrector of fools. Wisdom walks before it, opportunities with it and repentance behind it. He that hath made it his friend hath nothing to fear from his enemies, but he that hath made it his enemy hath little to hope from his friends."
